Background

The Muscular System

The muscular system of the vertebrate system is extensive & the most active system, performing pumping functions, locomotion, breathing, posture, digestion, heat, sensory input & force generation, etc. The entire system is divided into three systems, making for functions & activities fairly straightforward. Skeletal muscle (voluntary) mostly built of unbranched & striated fibers. Smooth muscle is an individual, organically up of branched muscle fibers. Cardiac muscle is a combination of these & has its own type of muscle fibers (striated, branched, myofibrils).

Skeletal Muscle

Skeletal muscle is the most abundant type of muscle in the body.

Skeletal muscle is striated, voluntary, branching, and is attached to bones. It is composed of skeletal muscle cells (fibers) that are long and cylindrical. The cells are multinucleated and have a striated appearance. Skeletal muscle is attached to bones at joints, where they contract, they pull the attachment points closer to each other.

Skeletal muscle is made up of contractile units called myofibrils. These are the basic unit of contraction. They are made up of actin and myosin filaments. The myofibrils are arranged in a regular pattern, giving the muscle a striated appearance. The myofibrils are made up of repeating units called sarcomeres. The sarcomere is the basic unit of contraction. It is made up of actin and myosin filaments. The actin filaments are thin and the myosin filaments are thick. The myosin filaments have myofibrils that are attached to the actin filaments. The myofibrils are made up of repeating units called sarcomeres. The sarcomere is the basic unit of contraction. It is made up of actin and myosin filaments. The actin filaments are thin and the myosin filaments are thick. The myosin filaments have myofibrils that are attached to the actin filaments.

Cardiac Muscle

Cardiac muscle is only found in the heart and is composed of striated muscle cells that are branched and have a striated appearance. The cells are made up of actin and myosin filaments. The myofibrils are arranged in a regular pattern, giving the muscle a striated appearance. The myofibrils are made up of repeating units called sarcomeres. Smooth Muscle

Smooth muscle is found in the walls of internal organs and is composed of non-striated muscle cells. The cells are made up of actin and myosin filaments.
