systems have the potential to offer highly intuitive user interfaces as they allow systems to be controlled using natural language. However, the complexity inherent in natural language dialogs means that careful testing of the system must be carried out from the very beginning of the design process. This book examines how user models can be used to support such early evaluations in two ways: by running simulations of dialogs and by estimating the quality judgments of users. First, a design environment supporting the creation of dialog flows, the simulation of dialogs and the analysis of the simulated data is proposed. How the quality of user simulations may be quantified with respect to their suitability for both formative and summative evaluation is then discussed. The remainder of the book is dedicated to the problem of predicting quality judgments of users based on interaction data. New modeling approaches are presented which process the dialogs as sequences and which allow knowledge about the judgment behavior of users to be incorporated into predictions. All proposed methods are validated with example evaluation studies.

Introduction to Video Search Engines David C. Gibbon, Zhu Liu, 2008-09-20. The evolution of technology has set the stage for the rapid growth of the video Web. Broadband Internet access is ubiquitous and streaming media protocols, systems and encoding standards are mature. In addition to Web video delivery, users can easily contribute content captured on low cost camera phones and other consumer products. The media and entertainment industry no longer views these developments as a threat to their established business practices but as an opportunity to provide services for more viewers in a wider range of consumption contexts. The emergence of IPTV and mobile video services offers unprecedented access to an ever growing number of broadcast channels and provides the flexibility to deliver new, more personalized video services. Highly capable portable media players allow us to take this personalized content with us and to consume it even in places where the network does not reach. Video search engines enable users to take advantage of these emerging video resources for a wide variety of applications including entertainment, education and communications. However, the task of information extraction from video for retrieval applications is challenging, providing opportunities for innovation. This book aims to first describe the current state of video search engine technology and second to inform those with the requisite technical skills of the opportunities to contribute to the development of this field.

Today's Web search engines have greatly improved the accessibility and therefore the value of the Web.
