UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA ESSAY PROMPT SAMPLE

What would you bring as a student to the University of California?

Growing up with autism was not very easy, and I have long accepted the fact that in many areas, it takes more time and effort for me to perform the same tasks that others seem to easily grasp and execute. However, I also know that my experiences have taught me many invaluable lessons that I am extremely thankful to have learned. Four years ago, I was too timid and shy to even leave my house, and had to be home-schooled. One of the biggest decisions in my life was my determination to attend public school instead of continuing the private education that my parents had been providing me all my life. This decision came from watching a documentary on children with psychological diseases in developing countries – I wanted to do something for them, and it started with experiencing the outside world.

During my time adjusting to life with children who did not have my condition, I have experienced many moments that I will remember forever. Some of them were unhappy, including teasing and bullying, but I know that social constructs are complex, and that sometimes these acts are evidence of deeper issues. Most of my memories were wonderful, including new friends that accepted me and who taught me the social patterns and cues I would need later on. These experiences have given me a way to connect with the world, and I hope to be able to impart the same gift on other children.

I know what it feels like to have autism because I have lived with it my whole life. As a result, I believe that I can help others with my condition understand their limitless potential and overcome the deep-set fear of exploring their dreams in society. The University of California is known worldwide as a diverse and welcoming campus, and I look forward to making new friends and learning about their stories, as well as sharing my own.
