The Routledge Handbook of the Political Economy of the Environment Éloi Laurent, Klara Zwickl, 2021-10-27 Featuring a stellar international cast list of leading and cutting edge scholars The Routledge Handbook of the Political Economy of the Environment presents the state of the art of the discipline that considers ecological issues and crises from a political economy perspective This collective volume sheds new light on the effect of economic and power inequality on environmental dynamics and conversely on the economic and social impact of environmental dynamics The chapters gathered in this handbook make four original contributions to the field of political economy of the environment First they revisit essential concepts and methods of environmental economics in the light of their political economy Second they introduce readers to recent theoretical and empirical advances in key issues of political economy of the environment with a special focus on the relationship between inequality and environmental degradation a nexus that has dramatically come into focus with the COVID crisis Third the authors of this handbook open the field to its critical global and regional dimensions global issues such as the environmental justice movement and inequality and climate change as well as regional issues such as agriculture systems air pollution natural resources appropriation and urban sustainability Fourth and finally the work shows how novel analysis can translate into new forms of public policy that require institutional reform and new policy tools Ecosystems preservation international climate negotiations and climate mitigation policies all have a strong distributional dimension that chapters point to Pressing environmental policy such as carbon pricing and low carbon and energy transitions entail numerous social issues that also need to be accounted for with new analytical and technological tools This handbook will be an invaluable reference research and teaching tool for anyone interested in political economy approaches to environmental issues and ecological crises

The South African Higher Education Transformation Journey Grace Khunou, Nompumelelo Radebe, 2025-09-30 This book explores the transformation of the South African higher education system 30 years after democracy It examines the progress tensions and possibilities through a detailed analysis of how inclusion curriculum transformation and epistemological shifts have shaped and continue to shape South African higher education The chapters draw on a range of theoretical frameworks including decolonization Africanization and intersectionality The book argues that while the South African higher education system has made significant strides in expanding access and fostering critical engagement the journey toward full transformation remains an ongoing endeavor The conclusions reached in the book suggest that deep inclusion meaningful curriculum transformation and epistemic justice require sustained institutional commitment policy alignment and active engagement with students academics and society at large

Global University Rankings and the Mediatization of Higher Education Michelle Stack, 2016-04-12 Higher Education Institutions simultaneously critique and participate in national and international rankings of universities However this creates a difficult situation since if universities do participate in rankings they acquiesce to a system based in media logics that has little to do with academic norms of research If they do not participate in the rankings they risk losing public funding students and donors in an increasingly competitive and globalized environment This book delves into the influence of journalists business tycoons and multinational corporations in defining what world class is and how it will be measured Rankings provide us with a rich study for understanding how universities define deploy and manage their assets and liabilities in a mediatized globalized economy

Structural Transformation in South Africa Antonio Andreoni, Pamela Mondliwa, Simon Roberts, Fiona Tregenna, 2021 Taking South Africa as an important case study of the challenges of structural transformation Structural Transformation in South Africa offers a new micro meso level framework and evidence linking country specific and global dynamics of change with a focus on the current challenges and opportunities faced by middle income countries Detailed analyses of industry groupings and interests in South Africa reveal the complex set of interlocking country specific factors which have hampered structural transformation over several decades but also the emerging productive areas and opportunities for structural change The structural transformation trajectory of South Africa presents a unique country case given its industrial structure concentration and highly internationalized economy as well as the objective of black economic empowerment Structural Transformation in South Africa links these micro meso dynamics to global forces driving economic institutional and social change This include digital industrialization global value chain consolidation financialization environmental and other sustainability challenges which are reshaping structural transformation dynamics across middle income countries like South Africa While these new drivers of change are disrupting existing industries and interests in some areas in others they are reinforcing existing trends and configurations of power The book analyses the ways in which both the domestic and global drivers of structural transformation shape and in some cases are shaped by a country's political settlement and its evolution By focusing on the political economy of structural transformation the book disentangles the specific dynamics underlying the South African experience of the middle income country conundrum In so doing it brings to light the broader challenges faced by similar countries in achieving structural transformation via industrial policies
