Hiller, 2014 Rather than interpreting the Olympics as primarily a sporting event of international or national significance this book understands the Games as a civic project for the host city that serves as a catalyst for a variety of urban interests over a period of many years from the bidding phase through the event itself Traditional Olympic studies have tended to examine the Games from an outsider's perspective or as something experienced through the print media or television In contrast the focus presented here is on the dynamics within the host city understood as a community of interacting individuals who encounter the Games in a variety of ways through support opposition or even indifference but who have a profound influence on the outcome of the Games as actors and players in the Olympics as a drama Adopting a symbolic interactionist approach the book offers a new interpretive model through which to understand the Olympic Games by exploring the relationship between the Games and residents of the host city Key analytical concepts such as framing dramaturgy the public realm and the symbolic field are introduced and illustrated through empirical research from the Vancouver 2010 Winter Games and it is shown how the social media and shifts in public opinion reflected interaction effects within the city By filling a clear lacuna in the Olympic Studies canon this book is important reading for anybody with an interest in the sociology of sport urban studies event studies or urban sociology When Television was Young Paul Rutherford, 1990-01-01 A decade after the first Canadian telecasts in September 1952 TV had conquered the country Why was the little screen so enthusiastically welcomed by Canadians Was television in its early years more innovative less commercial and more Canadian than current offerings In this study of what is often called the golden age of television Paul Rutherford has set out to dispel some cherished myths and to resurrect the memory of a noble experiment in the making of Canadian culture He focuses on three key aspects of the story The first is the development of the national service including the critical acclaim won by Radio Canada the struggles of the CBC's English service to provide mass entertainment that could compete with the Hollywood product and the effective challenge of private television to the whole dream of public broadcasting The second deals with the wealth of made in Canada programming available to please and inform viewers even commercials receive close attention Altogether Rutherford argues Canadian programming reflected as well as enhanced the prevailing values and assumptions of the mainstream The final focus is on McLuhan's Question What happens to society when a new medium of communications enters the picture Rutherford s findings cast doubt upon the common presumptions about the awesome power of television Television in Canada Rutherford concludes amounts to a failed revolution It never realized the ambitions of its masters or the fears of its critics Its course was shaped not only by the will of the government the power of commerce and the empire of Hollywood but also by the desires and habits of the viewers
