The Best British Short Stories of 1922 Stacy Aumonier,2018-10-17

Excerpt Never before have men had such opportunities for knowing the world never before has it been so easy to cover space our means of communication have never been so rapid yet there is an almost maddening contradiction in the fact that every man who writes is content in describing but a single facet of the great adventure of life Our age is an age of specialisation and many a man spends a life in trying to visualise for us a fragment of existence in multitudinous variations

An Empire may be said to stand for a universalising tendency yet the extraordinary fact about the mass of English stories today is that far from being expressive of any tendency to unity they are mostly concerned with presenting the specialised atmospheres of so many individual localities and vocations We have writers who do not go beyond Dartmoor or Park Lane or the East End of London we have writers of sea stories jungle stories detective stories lost jewel stories slum stories and we have writers who seldom stray from the cricket field or the prize ring or Freudian complexes

When Edward J O'Brien asked me to cooperate with him in choosing each year s best English short stories to be published as a companion volume to his annual selection of the best American short stories I had not realized that at the end of my arduous task which has involved the reading of many hundreds of stories in the English magazines of an entire year I should find myself asking the simple question What is a short story I do not suppose that a hundred years ago such a question could have occurred to any one Then all that a story was and could be was implied in the simple phrase Tell me a story We all know what that means How many stories published today would stand this simple if final test of being told by word of mouth I doubt whether fifty per cent would Surely the universality of the printing press and the linotype machine have done something to alter the character of literature just as the train and the telephone have done not a little to abolish polite correspondence Most stories of today are to be read not told Hence great importance must be attached to the manner of writing in some instances the whole effect of a modern tale is dependent on the manner of presentation Henry James is possibly an extreme example
