Sage urged PM to order a harsher lockdown

Johnson overruled scientists who called for measures tougher than three-tier system

By Emma Duncanson

Prime Minister Boris Johnson overruled government scientists who urged a much harsher lockdown to bring the coronavirus epidemic under control, a senior Tory minister has said. The minister, Lord Cummings, said that the government's decision to implement a three-tier system was a "mistake" and that the government should have followed the advice of the scientists who called for a "lockdown of the kind that we have seen in other countries". Cummings said that the government's decision was a "mistake" and that the government should have followed the advice of the scientists who called for a "lockdown of the kind that we have seen in other countries".

Mr Johnson said the new system would simplify the measures and confer further support on businesses. "Last night, clearly, we have made a decision to implement a three-tier system, but I think it is important to say that the government has not yet decided on the details of the measures that will be taken in each tier. We are still in the process of consulting with businesses and the public on the details of the measures that will be taken in each tier. We are still in the process of consulting with businesses and the public on the details of the measures that will be taken in each tier."

Boris Johnson overruled the three-tier lockdown system of a Downing Street press conference last night and talks with local leaders about which tier their area is placed in

But the prime minister's decision to implement a three-tier system has been widely criticised by scientists and the public. The three-tier system, which was announced last night, divides the country into three tiers based on the number of coronavirus cases. Tier 1 is the least restrictive, tier 2 is more restrictive, and tier 3 is the most restrictive. The government has said that it will be consulting with businesses and the public on the details of the measures that will be taken in each tier.

recesses of Byron's poetic thought Amongst the particular themes discussed here are the presence of women in the lives and poetry of both men the disentangling of the sense of alienation and exile exhibited in their authorial psyches the significance of the doppelgänger for their satire and a weighing of the deep contrapuntal nature of Byron's thought contrasting it with Pope's Byron and the Best of Poets is the first major study of its kind to explore these multiple aspects and to unpack them in the work of both poets
