the prayers for the day How stifling how hot it was How long the service went on Bishop Pyotr was tired His breathing was laboured and rapid his throat was parched his shoulders ached with weariness his legs were trembling And it disturbed him unpleasantly when a religious maniac uttered occasional shrieks in the gallery And then all of a sudden as though in a dream or delirium it seemed to the bishop as though his own mother Marya Timofyevna whom he had not seen for nine years or some old woman just like his mother came up to him out of the crowd and after taking a palm branch from him walked away looking at him all the while good humouredly with a kind joyful smile until she was lost in the crowd And for some reason tears flowed down his face There was peace in his heart everything was well yet he kept gazing fixedly towards the left choir where the prayers were being read where in the dusk of evening you could not recognize anyone and wept Tears glistened on his face and on his beard Here someone close at hand was weeping then someone else farther away then others and still others and little by little the church was filled with soft weeping And a little later within five minutes the nuns choir was singing no one was weeping and everything was as before
