NEW CHOICES that quickly drain our energy

01 UTILITIES

Before there were monopolies, now the model is "figure it out for yourself".

02 RETIREMENT

Company pension plans are nonexistent, so how are we supposed to know the best option for retirement planning?

03 HEALTH

Can you think of anyone who understands what their insurance covers? No? Then how do you pick the right one?

04 MEDICAL

When offered the choice, would you rather have the doctor (the expert) decide your treatment plan or you?

05 BEAUTY

"Beauty used to be a gift bestowed on the few. Today, it's an achievement, and homeliness is a failure."

06 WORK

Job mobility is part of the American dream, but with an infinite amount of options, isn't it more of a nightmare?

07 LOVE

Relationships are about "choosing battles" but couples face so many choices about how to love that it all just feels like a battle.

08 PRAYER

87% of Americans consider religion important, and now they get to become religion shoppers to find the flavor they like most.

09 WHO TO BE

Choosing your identity is nearly impossible when confronted with all of the creative options.

WHY WE SUFFER from the overload of options

Choice and happiness

Freedom and autonomy are critical to our well-being, and choice is critical to that. Nonetheless, though modern Americans have more choice than any group of people ever has before, we don't seem to be benefitting from it psychologically.

Problem of adaptation

Because of adaptation (the process of getting used to something and taking it for granted), enthusiasm about positive experiences doesn't sustain itself. This waning of pleasure or enjoyment over time always seems to come as an unpleasant surprise.

Missed opportunities

Part of the downside of abundant choice is that each new option adds to the list of trade-offs, and those have psychological consequences. The necessity of making trade-offs affects the level of satisfaction we experience from the decisions we make.

Everything suffers from comparison

When you are evaluating an experience, you compare it to your expectations. The circumstances of modern life seem to be conspiring to make experiences less satisfying than they could be in part because of the richness against which we are comparing them. Again, an overload of choices contributes to this dissatisfaction.
