Skilled Migration, Expectation and Reality Ying Lu, Ramanie Samaratunge, 2016-04-01 Many governments seek to attract skilled migrants into the top occupational groups and now have significant groups of overseas born professionals in their workforces Such groups are expected to contribute significantly to the economic and social development of their new countries There has been sustained debate between those taking the view that skilled migrants are integrated without much difficulty and those concerned that a mismatch between aspirational government policies and actual organisational practice generates discontent and frustration among skilled immigrants If the latter is correct it seems likely that host societies will not benefit from the injection of human capital in terms of creativity and innovation In Skilled Migration Expectation and Reality the authors report the findings of their research into the acculturation and integration issues confronting professional Chinese immigrants in the Australian labour market Australia serves as a good example of the phenomenon under examination being a country where Chinese are one of the largest non English speaking ethnic groups and where they are strongly concentrated in the top occupational groups The authors rigorous quantitative and qualitative study is one of the first systematic examinations of acculturation to focus specifically on the workplace It reveals fascinating insights regarding the strategies that professional immigrants are compelled to adopt because they are unable to find appropriate channels through which to integrate and assimilate into the host society

The Routledge Research Companion to Planning and Culture Greg Young, 2016-03-23 It has become increasingly evident that effective planning for sustainable communities environments and economies pivots on the ability of planners to see the possibilities for culture in comprehensive social historical and environmental terms and to more fully engage with the cultural practices processes and theorisation that comprise a social formation More broadly an approach to planning theory and practice that is itself formed through a close engagement with culture is required This Research Companion brings together leading experts from around the world to map the contours of the relationship between planning and culture and to present these inextricably linked concepts and issues together in one place. By examining significant trends in varying national and international contexts, the contributors scrutinise the theories and practices of both planning and culture and explore not only their interface but significant divergences and tensions. In doing so, this collection provides the first comprehensive overview and analysis of planning and culture interdisciplinary and international in scope. It is comprised of six parts organised around the themes of global and historical contexts, key dimensions of planning and cultural theory and practice, and cultural and planning dynamics. Each section includes a final chapter that provides a case study lens which pulls the themes of the section together with reference to a significant planning issue or initiative.
