Criminological and Legal Consequences of Climate Change Stephen Farrall,Tawhida Ahmed,Duncan French,2012-04-02 This edited collection the result of an international seminar held at the International Institute for the Sociology of Law O ati Spain in 2010 explores the potential legal and criminological consequences of climate change both domestically and for the international community A novel feature of the book is the consideration given to the potential synergies between the two disciplinary foci thus to encourage among legal scholars and criminologists not only an analysis of the consequences of climate change from these perspectives but to bring these fields together to provide a unique inter disciplinary exploration of the ways in which climate change does or could impact on our societies Such an inter disciplinary approach is necessary given that climate change is a multifaceted phenomenon and one which is intimately linked across disciplines To study this topic from the point of view of a single social science discipline restricts our understanding of the societal consequences of climate change It is hoped that this edited collection will identify emerging areas of concern illuminate areas for further research and most of all encourage future academic discussion on this most critical of issues

Xuetao Sun,Robert Speed,Dajun Shen,2013-09-13 Chinese water resource managers face a challenge that is both immense and unique They must balance limited water supplies against the needs of the world s largest population demands for rapid economic growth with calls for improved environmental management and the desire for a market based approach to the allocation of water with a history of State ownership and strict government control of all resources In China changes are occurring in water resources management that are representative of many of the fundamental changes occurring within Chinese society on issues such as property rights community participation improved environmental management and the shift towards market based decision making This book describes the development of a water rights system in the People's Republic of China It covers different aspects of water resources management in China including water planning the provision of environmental flows urban water management and irrigation district management and examines how these are being addressed through a rights based approach The book includes several detailed examples of the Chinese application of water rights as they address the diverse challenges of different basins across China This book previously appeared as a special issue of the International Journal of Water Resources Development

Sustainable Coastal Management and Climate Adaptation Richard Kenchington, David Wood, Laura Stocker, 2012-09-06 Australians are famous for our love of the coast although in many places this love has caused serious and often irreversible impacts The sustainable management of our society's many uses of the coast is complex and challenging While a wealth of knowledge exists about the coast this is not always brought to bear on decision making Coastal management to date has had limited success and in some cases interventions have made problems worse Australia's coast has been shaped by severe events such as cyclones and floods with climate change now increasing the number and intensity of these hazards In addition our coastal populations are growing and with them our social environmental and economic vulnerability to such hazards This book explores the evolution of coastal management and provides critical insights into contemporary experience and understanding of coastal management in Australia It draws on contemporary theory and lessons from case examples to highlight the roles of research and community engagement in coastal management The book concludes with a chapter of recommendations which can help guide coastal management and research around the world

Landscape Logic, 2012 Case studies examine the effectiveness of environmental programs to improve our waterways soils and natural vegetation from publisher

Demographic Change in Australia's Rural Landscapes Gary W. Luck, Digby Race, Rosemary Black, 2010-11-30 The distribution and re distribution of people across the landscape has significant implications for ecological economic and social dynamics Movement of people to urban centres mostly from rural landscapes especially in the developing world is a major global phenomenon This can result in the de population of rural landscapes Conversely population growth and a changing demographic profile have been identified for particular rural landscapes with notable examples from North America Europe and Australia Yet we know little of the factors that drive demographic changes in rural landscapes and even less about the implications of these changes This book examines broad and local scale patterns of demographic change in rural landscapes identifies some of the drivers of these changes using Australian case studies or comparisons between Australian and international contexts and outlines the implications of changes for society and the environment This book makes a valuable contribution to the literature because it adopts an integrated and interdisciplinary approach by explicitly linking demographic change with environmental land use social and economic factors This integrated approach was achieved by encouraging interaction among authors writing on similar topics to ensure coherency and complementarity among chapters and cross pollination of ideas and perspectives Chapters are presented as interactive and reflective discussions that address the findings of other contributors yet each chapter contains enough background to stand alone as a unique contribution
