

The background of the cover is a stylized illustration of a Cornish coastline. On the left, a steep, brown and green cliff face descends towards a sandy beach. The sea is depicted in shades of blue and green, with white foam from waves crashing against the shore. Several small figures of people are scattered across the beach and near the water's edge. In the distance, more cliffs and a hazy horizon are visible under a pale sky.

Down from London Carolyn W. de la L. Oulton, 2022-02-15 In the first hundred years of the UK rail network the seaside figures as a nerve centre managing and making visible the period's complex interplay between health death gender and sexuality This monograph discusses around 130 novels of the railway age to show how the seaside infiltrates a diverse range of literature subverting the boundaries between high and low literary culture The seaside holiday galvanises innovative literary forms including early twentieth century holiday crime and romance fiction which has its origins in the sensational strategies of mid nineteenth century authors Where reading takes place is at least as important as what is read and case studies on literary Brighton and Dickensian Kent explore the occasionally fraught relationship between seaside towns and the metropolis as London visitors are represented in and are the target audience for literary accounts of the seaside holiday The act of reading by the sea is itself overdetermined and problematic a dilemma that is managed in part through the development of text free literary tourism in the late nineteenth century Deploying strategies from literary criticism histories of reading libraries and the book and literary tourism this book recovers seaside reading as both a literary sub genre and a deeply contested mode of engagement Crime Writing in Interwar Britain Victoria Stewart, 2017-08-24
