Frog Neurobiology R. Llinas, W. Precht, 2012-12-06 In review the amount of information available on the morphological and functional properties of the frog nervous system is very extensive indeed and in certain areas is the only available source of information in vertebrates. Furthermore, much of the now classical knowledge in neurobiology was originally obtained and elaborated in depth in this vertebrate. To cite only a few examples, studies of nerve conduction, neuromuscular transmission, neuronal integration, sense organs, development and locomotion have been developed with great detail in the frog and in conjunction provide the most complete holistic description of any nervous system. Added to the above considerations, the ease with which these animals may be maintained both as adults and during development and the advantage of their lower cost as compared with other vertebrate forms make the frog one of the most important laboratory animals in neurobiology. With these thoughts in mind, we decided to compile this volume. Our goal in doing so was to assemble as much as possible of the information available on frog neurobiology and to have the different topics covered by authorities in each of the fields represented. To keep the handbook restricted to one volume, we found it necessary to omit the large field of amphibian muscle neurobiology which has already been summarized in various other publications.

Inflammation and Retinal Disease: Complement Biology and Pathology John D. Lambris, Anthony P. Adamis, 2010-08-14 Numerous studies have pointed to the key role of complement in the pathogenesis of retinal disease, particularly age-related macular degeneration (AMD). Reports about new gene associations and links to other physiological pathways are emerging almost on a weekly basis. Several promising clinical candidates covering a wide area of potential treatment applications are in the pipelines of both industrial and academic groups. This indicates an increasing interest in complement as a therapeutic target. In view of these exciting discoveries, scientists from around the world convened at the First Aegean Conference on Inflammation and Retinal Disease: Complement Biology and Pathology, June 10-17, 2007, in Crete, Greece, to discuss recent advances in this rapidly evolving field. This volume represents a collection of topics on the functions of complement in eye diseases, pathophysiology, protein structures, and complement therapeutics discussed during the conference. Our sincere thanks to the contributing authors for the time and effort they have devoted to writing what I consider exceptionally informative chapters in a book that will have a significant impact on the complement field. We would also like to express my thanks to Rodanthi Lambris for her assistance in collating the chapters and preparing the documents for publication, and I gratefully acknowledge the generous help provided by Dimitrios Lambris in managing the organization of this meeting. Finally, I also thank Andrea Macaluso of Springer Publishers for her supervision in this book's production.

Biochemistry of the Eye

Elaine R. Berman,2013-11-22 My first introduction to the eye came more than three decades ago when my close friend and mentor the late Professor Isaac C Michaelson convinced me that studying the biochemistry of ocular tissues would be a rewarding pursuit I hastened to explain that I knew nothing about the subject since relatively few basic biochemical studies on ocular tissues had appeared in the world literature Professor Michaelson assured me however that two books on eye biochemistry had already been written One of them a beautiful monograph by Arlington Krause 1934 of Johns Hopkins Hospital is we II worth reading even today for its historical perspective The other published 22 years later was written by Antoinette Pirie and Ruth van Heyningen 1956 whose pioneering achievements in eye biochemistry at the Nuffield Laboratory of Ophthalmology in Oxford England are known throughout the eye research community and beyond To their credit are classical investigations on retinal corneal and lens biochemistry beginning in the 1940s and continuing for many decades thereafter Their important book written in 1956 on the Biochemistry of the Eye is a volume that stood out as a landmark in this field for many years In recent years however a spectacular amount of new information has been generated in ocular biochemistry Moreover there is increasing specialization among investigators in either a specific field of biochemistry or a particular ocular tissue Journal of Biological Education ,1987 Advances in Protein Chemistry ,1955-01-01 Advances in Protein Chemistry Foundations of Biology Gairdner Bostwick Moment,Helen Virginia Crouse,1953 The School News and Practical Educator ,1916 Science-gossip John Thomas Carrington,1894 Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists ,1986-04 The Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists is the premier public resource on scientific and technological developments that impact global security Founded by Manhattan Project Scientists the Bulletin s iconic Doomsday Clock stimulates solutions for a safer world Basic Digital Computer and Programming Concepts United States.
