Hard Grass Mary Zeiss Stange, 2010-08-16 Mary Zeiss Stange's story of running a bison ranch with her husband in southeastern Montana on the outskirts of nowhere and far from here is a narrative of survival in a landscape and a society at once harsh and alluring. In this series of essays she illustrates the realities of ranch life at a time when the New West of subdivision ranchettes, telecommuting and tourism collides with the True West of too much, too little, too hard and too harsh. This society is molded by the climate and both run to extremes simultaneously: unforgiving, often brutal yet capable of unalloyed charm and breathtaking beauty. Her stories explore the myths and realities of ranch life in modern America: the brandings, rodeos and demolition derbies that are major events and the social, environmental and political factors at work in shaping the land and the people. Less memoir than deep history of people and place, these vivid naturalistic tales examine the complex relationships that comprise life in the rural West today.

Reciprocity Rules Michelle C. Johnson, Edmund (Ned) Searles, 2020-12-16 Reciprocity Rules explores the rich and complicated relationships that develop between anthropologists and research participants over time. Focusing on compensation and the creation of friendship and family relationships, contributors discuss what, when and how researchers and the people with whom they work give to each other in and beyond fieldwork. Through reflexivity and narrative, the contributors to this edited collection, who are in various stages in their professional careers and whose research spans three continents and eight countries, reflect on the ways in which they have compensated their research participants and given back to host communities as well as the varied responses to their efforts. The contributors consider both material and non-material forms of reciprocity: stories of successes and failures and the taken-for-granted notions of compensation, friendship and helping. In so doing, they address the interpersonal dynamics of power and agency in the field, examine cultural misunderstandings and highlight the challenges that anthropologists face as they strive to maintain good relations with their hosts even when separated by time and space. The contributors argue that while learning, following, openly discussing and writing about the local rules of reciprocity are always challenging, they are essential to responsible research practice and ongoing efforts to decolonize anthropology.

Reading Life with Gwich'in Jan Peter Laurens Loovers, 2019-12-10 This book is based upon more than two years of ethnographic fieldwork and personal experiences with the Teet it Gwich'in community in northern Canada. The author provides insight into Gwich'in understandings of life as well as into historical and political processes that have taken place in the North. He outlines the development of an educational approach towards conducting ethnography and writing anthropological literature, starting with the premise you have to live it. The book focuses on ways of knowing and collaboration through learning and being taught by interlocutors. Building on the work of Tim Ingold, Loovers investigates the notion of reading life: land, water and weather as well as texts and analyses the reading of texts as acts of conversations or correspondences.
