

College and University and History and the Law 1999-2000

Example (1) given credit

Although not consistent with the recommendations for including these more specialized areas, a thesis candidate included a chapter in "The non-representing student population: national representation by study in history and representation." He argued: "There is no doubt that the study of the representation of the student population from the 1950s to the 1990s is a field that has been largely ignored."

1. "Considerable work has been done on the history of the student population in the United States (e.g., the history of the student population in the United States and the history of the student population in the United States) but the history of the student population in the United States has not been fully explored." (2-3 paragraphs on student population in the United States)
2. "The history of the student population in the United States is largely unknown and is not representative of the student population in the United States. The history of the student population in the United States is largely unknown and is not representative of the student population in the United States." (2-3 paragraphs on student population in the United States)
