Review of Recreational Fisheries Survey Methods National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Ocean Studies Board, Committee on the Review of Recreational Fisheries Survey Methods, 2006-08-13 Recreational fishing in the United States is an important social and economic component of many marine fisheries with an estimated 14 million anglers making almost 82 million fishing trips in 2004 Although each individual angler typically harvests a small number of fish collectively these sport fisheries can take a significant fraction of the yearly catch in some cases more than commercial fisheries For example in 1999 recreational fishing accounted for 94% of the total catch of spotted sea trout 76% of striped bass and sheephead and 60 percent of king mackerel It is important that systems used to monitor fishing catch are adequate for timely management of recreational fisheries However the large number of anglers and access points makes monitoring recreational fishing much more difficult than monitoring commercial fishing This report reviews the types of survey methods used to estimate catch in recreational fisheries including state federal cooperative programs The report finds that both telephone survey and onsite access components of the current monitoring systems have serious flaws in design or implementation There are also several areas of miscommunication and mismatched criteria among designers of surveys data collectors and recreational fisheries The report recommends that a comprehensive universal sampling frame with national coverage should be established and that improvements should be made in statistical analysis of the data collected and in the ways the data are communicated A permanent and independent research group should be established and funded to evaluate the statistical design and adequacy of recreational fishery surveys and to guide necessary modifications or new initiatives
