A Distant Technology J. P. Telotte, 1999 Science fiction films celebrate and critique the impact of a burgeoning technology on the world's cultural political and social milieu The Machine Age roughly delineated by the two decades between World Wars was a watershed period during which modern society entered into an ambiguous embrace with technology that continues today J P Telotte carefully blends film technology cultural and genre studies to illuminate this nearly forgotten era in our cinematic history and to show through analysis of classics like The Invisible Ray Metropolis and Things to Come how technology played a major role as motif actor and producer What he also discovers as he ranges among the American British Russian French and German science fiction cinema as well as mainstream films figures and cultural products such as the New York World's Fair is a fundamental ambivalence embedded in the films themselves about the very machine age ethos they promoted Even as advances in the technical apparatus of filmmaking elevated it from mere entertainment to a medium of general communication and genuine artistic expression Machine Age science fiction films remained curiously distant from and often skeptical of the very machines on which their narratives focus The resulting tensions Telotte writes thus seem to intersect with those implicit in a Western world that was struggling with its own transition into the modern rendering the films task inevitably paradoxical and difficult
