Conserving and restoring freshwater and marine ecosystems are priorities addressed by several European and global conservation initiatives Many management and conservation initiatives have been put in place to support the achievement of declared national and global conservation and sustainability goals Nonetheless the extent to which all these initiatives can provide lasting positive effects on conservation and restoration targets is often impaired limited by the lack of robust baseline data and systematic monitoring which in turn are constrained by the limited number of long term monitoring programs and limited dedicated funding This collection underlines the importance of monitoring in times of global change and shifting baselines and the urgency of boosting conservation strategies to ensure progression towards meeting global conservation objectives Emphasis is given also to the socio ecological contexts and dimensions of conservation efforts and the potential of societal engagement in monitoring practices a key enabling factor to turn conservation initiatives into practical actions and ecosystem protection Remote Sensing for Ecology and Conservation Ned Horning, Julie A. Robinson, Eleanor J.

Sterling, Woody Turner, Sacha Spector, 2010-07-01 The work of conservation biology has grown from local studies of single species into a discipline concerned with mapping and managing biodiversity on a global scale Remote sensing using satellite and aerial imaging to measure and map the environment increasingly provides a vital tool for effective collection of the information needed to research and set policy for conservation priorities The perceived complexities of remotely sensed data and analyses have tended to discourage scientists and managers from using this valuable resource This text focuses on making remote sensing tools accessible to a larger audience of non specialists highlighting strengths and limitations while emphasizing the ways that remotely sensed data can be captured and used especially for evaluating human impacts on ecological systems Species Diversity of Animals in Japan Masaharu Motokawa, Hiroshi Kajihara, 2016-11-26 This book summarizes the status quo of the knowledge about the biodiversity in terrestrial freshwater and marine animals that live in Japan Consisting of some 6 800 islands that are arrayed for approximately 3 500 km from north to south the Japanese archipelago has a complex history in a paleogeographic formation process over time and harbors rich flora and fauna This work will contribute to establishing a general biogeographic theory in archipelagoes around continental shelves Facing the ongoing extinction crisis one of the most important tasks for our generation is to bequeath this precious natural heritage to future generations As the first step toward this goal a species list has been compiled through solid steady alpha taxonomic work in each taxon Furthermore the phylogeography and population genetic structure for each species is elucidated for deeper understanding of the local fauna the scientific results of which should be the basis for establishing conservation policies and strategies Also the problem of alien or introduced species is investigated as another threat to the native fauna Each of the 27 chapters is written by the most active specialist leading the field thus readers can acquire up to date knowledge of the animal species diversity and their formation process of Japanese animals in the most comprehensive form available This book is recommended for researchers and students who are interested in species diversity biogeography and phylogeography Science Citation Index ,1995 Vols for 1964 have guides and journal lists
