United Nations World Development Report:

The United Nations world water development report, 2017 WWAP, UNESCO, 2017-03-15 The United Nations World Water Assessment Programme WWAP is hosted and led by UNESCO WWAP brings together the work of 31 UN Water Members and 38 Partners to publish The United Nations World Water Development Report WWDR series The annual World Water Development Reports focus on strategic water issues UN Water Members and Partners all experts in their respective fields contribute the latest findings on a specific theme The 2017 edition of the World Water Development Report focuses on Wastewater and seeks to inform decision makers inside and outside the water community about the importance of managing wastewater as an undervalued and sustainable source of water energy nutrients and other recoverable by products rather than something to be disposed of or a nuisance to be ignored The report's title Wastewater The Untapped Resource reflects the critical role that wastewater is poised to play in the context of a circular economy whereby economic development is balanced with the protection of natural resources and environmental sustainability and where a cleaner and more sustainable economy has a positive effect on the water quality Improved wastewater management is not only critical to achieving the Sustainable Development Goal on clean water and sanitation SDG 6 but also to other goals of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development

The United Nations World Water Development Report UNESCO World Water Assessment Programme, 2021-03-22 Water is a finite and non substitutable resource As the foundation of life societies and economies it carries multiple values and benefits But unlike most other natural resources it has proven extremely difficult to determine its true value The 2021 edition of the United Nations World Water Development Report titled Valuing Water assesses the current status of and challenges to the valuation of water across different sectors and perspectives and identifies ways in which valuation can be promoted as a tool to help improve its management and achieve global sustainable development

World Development Report 2021 World Bank, 2021-07-02 The unprecedented growth of data and its ubiquity in our daily lives signal that the digital revolution is transforming the world But much of the value of data remains untapped waiting to be realized Data collected for one particular purpose has the potential to generate economic value in applications far beyond those originally anticipated However many barriers stand in the way of the beneficial reuse of data ranging from misaligned incentives and incompatible data systems to a fundamental lack of trust The World Development Report 2021 Data for Better Lives will explore the tremendous potential of the changing data landscape to improve the lives of poor people but also to open backdoors that can harm individuals businesses and societies The first part of the report assesses how better use and reuse of data can enhance the design of public policies programs and service delivery as well as improve market efficiency and job creation through private sector growth The second part of the report focuses on issues of governance law and policy that can help realize data's potential benefits while safeguarding against harmful outcomes By examining these issues the report aims to show how data can be leveraged to benefit the lives of poor people The United Nations World Water Development Report 3 World Water Assessment Programme, 2012-05-23 The United Nations World Water Development Report published every three years is a comprehensive review providing an authoritative picture of the state of the world's freshwater resources. It offers best practices as well as in-depth theoretical analyses to help stimulate ideas and actions for better stewardship in the water sector. It is the only report of its kind resulting from the collaboration and contributions of the 26 UN agencies, commissions, program funds, secretariats and conventions that have a significant role in addressing global water concerns. The news media are full of talk of crises in climate change, energy and food and troubled financial markets. These crises are linked to each other and to water resources management. Unresolved, they may lead to increasing political insecurity and conflict. Water is required to meet our fundamental needs and rising living standards and to sustain our planet's fragile ecosystems. Pressures on the resource come from a growing and mobile population, social and cultural change, economic development and technological change. Adding complexity and risk is climate change with impacts on the resource as well as on the sources of pressure on water. The challenges, though substantial, are not insurmountable. The Report shows how some countries have responded. Progress in providing drinking water is heartening with the Millennium Development Goal target on track in most regions. But other areas remain unaddressed and after decades of inaction the problems in water systems are enormous and will worsen if left unattended. Leaders in the water sector can inform decisions outside their domain and manage water resources to achieve agreed socioeconomic objectives and environmental integrity. Leaders in government, the private sector and civil society determine these objectives and allocate human and financial resources to meet them. Recognizing this responsibility, they must act now. Two volume set 336 World Development Report 2013 World Bank, 2012-10-15 Jobs provide higher earnings and better benefits as countries grow but they are also a driver of development. Poverty falls as people work their way out of hardship and as jobs empowering women lead to greater investments in children. Efficiency increases as workers get better at what they do as more productive jobs appear and less productive ones disappear. Societies flourish as jobs bring together people from different ethnic and social backgrounds and provide alternatives to conflict. Jobs are thus more than a byproduct of economic growth. They are transformational; they are what we earn, what we do and even who we are. High unemployment and unmet job expectations among youth are the most immediate concerns. But in many developing countries where farming and self-employment are prevalent and safety nets are modest, best unemployment rates can be low. In these countries growth is seldom jobless. Most of their poor work long hours but simply cannot make ends meet. And the violation of basic rights is not uncommon. Therefore the number of jobs is not all that matters; jobs with high development payoffs are needed. Confronted with these challenges, policy makers ask difficult questions: Should countries build their development strategies around growth or should they focus on jobs? Can entrepreneurship be fostered, especially among the many microenterprises in developing countries or are entrepreneurs born? Are greater investments in education and training a prerequisite for employability or can skills be built through jobs? In times of major crises and structural shifts should jobs not just workers be protected And is there a risk that policies supporting job creation in one country will come at the expense of jobs in other countries The World Development Report 2013 Jobs offers answers to these and other difficult questions by looking at jobs as drivers of development not as derived labor demand and by considering all types of jobs not just formal wage employment The Report provides a framework that cuts across sectors and shows that the best policy responses vary across countries depending on their levels of development endowments demography and institutions Policy fundamentals matter in all cases as they enable a vibrant private sector the source of most jobs in the world Labor policies can help as well even if they are less critical than is often assumed Development policies from making smallholder farming viable to fostering functional cities to engaging in global markets hold the key to success

World Development Report 2012 The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development / The World Bank The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development / The World Bank, 2011-09-28 The lives of women around the world have improved dramatically at a pace and scope difficult to imagine even 25 years ago Women have made unprecedented gains in rights education health and access to jobs and livelihoods More countries than ever guarantee equal rights in property marriage and other domains Gender gaps in primary schooling have closed in many countries while in a third of all countries girls now outnumber boys in secondary school And more young women than men attend universities in 60 countries Women are using their education to participate more in the labor force they now make up for 40 percent of the global labor force and 43 percent of its farmers Moreover women now live longer than men in every region of the world Despite the progress gaps remain in many areas Women are more likely to die relative to males in many low and middle income countries than their counterparts in rich countries especially in childhood and during their reproductive years Primary and secondary school enrollments for girls remain much lower than for boys in many Sub Saharan African countries and some parts of South Asia as well as among disadvantaged populations Women are more likely than men to work as unpaid family laborers or in the informal sector to farm smaller plots and grow less profitable crops operate in smaller firms and less profitable sectors and generally earn less Women especially poor women have less say over decisions and less control over household resources And in most countries fewer women participate in formal politics than men and are underrepresented in the upper echelons The World Development Report 2012 Gender Equality and Development argues that closing these persistent gender gaps matters It matters because gender equality is a core development objective in its own right But it is also smart economics Greater gender equality can enhance productivity improve development outcomes for the next generation and make institutions more representative Building on a growing body of knowledge on the economics of gender equality and development the Report identifies the areas where gender gaps are most significant both intrinsically and in terms of their potential development payoff and where growth alone cannot solve the issues It then sets forth four priorities for public action Reducing excess female mortality and closing education gaps where they remain Improving access to economic opportunities for women Increasing women s voice and agency in the household and in society Limiting the reproduction of gender inequality across generations World Development Report 2008 World Bank,2007-10-15 The world s demand for food is expected to double within the next 50 years while the natural resources that sustain agriculture will become increasingly scarce degraded and vulnerable to the effects of climate change In many poor countries agriculture accounts for at least 40 percent of GDP and 80 percent of employment At the same time about 70 percent of the world s poor live in rural areas and most depend on agriculture for their livelihoods World Development Report 2008 seeks to assess where when and how agriculture can be an effective instrument for economic development especially development that favors the poor It examines several broad questions How has agriculture changed in developing countries in the past 20 years What are the important new challenges and opportunities for agriculture Which new sources of agricultural growth can be captured cost effectively in particular in poor countries with large agricultural sectors as in Africa How can agricultural growth be made more effective for poverty reduction How can governments facilitate the transition of large populations out of agriculture without simply transferring the burden of rural poverty to urban areas How can the natural resource endowment for agriculture be protected How can agriculture s negative environmental effects be contained This year s report marks the 30th year the World Bank has been publishing the World Development Report World Development Indicators 2012 World Bank,2012-04-24 Looking for accurate up to date data on development issues World Development Indicators is the World Bank s premier annual compilation of data about development This indispensable statistical reference allows you to consult over 800 indicators for more than 150 economies and 14 country groups in more than 90 tables

World Development Report 2011 World Bank,2011-05-01 The 2011 WDR on Conflict Security and Development underlines the devastating impact of persistent conflict on a country or region s development prospects noting that the 1.5 billion people living in conflict affected areas are twice as likely to be in poverty Its goal is to contribute concrete practical suggestions on conflict and fragility World Development Report 2012 World Bank,2011-09-01 This year s World Development Report looks at facts and trends regarding the various dimensions of gender equality in the context of the development process World Development Report 2005 World Bank,2004 Firms and entrepreneurs of all types from microenterprises to multinationals play a central role in growth and poverty reduction Their investment decisions drive job creation the availability and affordability of goods and services for consumers and the tax revenues governments can draw on to fund health education and other services Their contribution depends largely on the way governments shape the investment climate in each location through the protection of property rights regulation and taxation strategies for providing infrastructure interventions in finance and labor markets and broader governance features such as corruption The World Development Report 2005 argues that improving the investment climates of their societies should be a top priority for governments Drawing on surveys of nearly 30 000 firms in 53 developing countries country case studies and other new research the Report explores questions such as What are the key features of a good investment climate and how do they influence growth and poverty What can governments do to improve their investment climates and how can they go about tackling such a broad agenda What has been learned about good practice in each of the main areas of the investment climate What role might selective interventions and international arrangements play in improving the investment climate What can the international community do to help developing countries improve the investment climates of their societies In addition to detailed chapters exploring these and related issues the Report contains selected data from the World Bank's new program of Investment Climate Surveys the Bank's Doing Business Project and World Development Indicators 2004 an appendix of economic and social data for over 200 countries This Report offers practical insights for policymakers executives scholars and all those with an interest in economic development

World Development Report 1980, 1980 Abstract Developing countries start the decade facing two major challenges to continue the social and economic progress of the past 30 years in an international climate that looks less helpful and to tackle the plight of the 800 million people living in absolute poverty who have benefitted too little from past progress This report examines some of the difficulties and prospects in both areas One of its central themes is the importance of people in development The first part of the report addresses the expected sluggish world economic growth as oil importing countries reduce their current account deficits and adapt to higher energy costs Domestic policies of developing countries will be crucial and the fate of poor people in these countries will be decided largely by domestic opportunities and policies The second part of the report describes the role of human development programs in education health nutrition and fertility reduction and their related effects on productivity and population growth

Economic Development at the Community Level Mark Miller, 2020-11-22 How do we create more economic opportunities in the low income communities of the developing world How can these communities build greater resilience against economic uncertainties natural disasters wars and the growing threats of climate change This book reviews the research literature of economic development in low income communities of the developing world from rural villages to neighborhoods in the largest cities on earth This book is unique in gathering organizing and synthesizing research on economic development at the community level across the developing world drawing from multiple disciplines publications methodologies regions and countries Part I provides an overview and context of the many challenges facing the developing world today as well as the often heated debates over what development is and how to make it happen Part II reviews the extensive research literature in major fields of community economic development including education and human capital overcoming the curse of natural resources entrepreneurship and micro finance tourism and sustainability The audience includes undergraduate students interested in development and sustainability graduate students and other young researchers in a wide range of disciplines who are finding their own focuses and established researchers who wish to expand their agendas An expanded bibliography accompanies the book as a downloadable supplement
