Making Education Inclusive Sharon Moonsamy, Elizabeth Walton, 2015-09-18 Exclusionary pressures and practices are pervasive in education despite the clamour for more inclusive education Even as classrooms worldwide become more diverse education is unlikely to become inclusive without deliberate efforts to dismantle exclusion and enable inclusion This book is a compilation of contributions to the conversation about what these efforts might entail The conversation has its origins in the Making Education Inclusive Conference held in 2013 which brought together academics and practitioners from Southern Africa and other countries Given the expectation that teachers should play a key role in promoting inclusion it is not surprising to find significant interest in teacher education from many of the contributing authors Their concerns range from explicit teacher development for pedagogical responsiveness to learner diversity to overcoming the epistemological marginalisation that learners experience where teachers are not fully confident of their subject content and how to teach it Access to education is clearly not enough and other contributors to this book concern themselves with ways in which structures and systems could be reconstituted to enable meaningful inclusion This might mean looking at how teachers might use tiered systems of behaviour support and various metacognitive strategies how physical access can be promoted on a university campus and understanding how parents think about disability Each chapter represents a different perspective on what it might mean to resist educational exclusion in its many forms and each offers possible ways to make education more inclusive

Transforming Ethnomusicology Volume II Beverley Diamond, Salwa El-Shawan Castelo-Branco, 2021 For decades ethnomusicologists across the world have considered how to affect positive change for the communities they work with Through illuminating case studies and reflections by a diverse array of scholars and practitioners Transforming Ethnomusicology aims to both expand dialogues about social engagement within ethnomusicology and at the same time transform how we understand ethnomusicology as a discipline The second volume of Transforming Ethnomusicology takes as a point of departure the recognition that colonial and environmental damages are grounded in historical and institutional failures to respect the land and its peoples Featuring Indigenous and other perspectives from Brazil North America Australia Africa and Europe this volume critically engages with how ethnomusicologists can support marginalized communities in sustaining their musical knowledge and threatened geographies

Transforming Ethnomusicology Volume I Beverley Diamond, Salwa El-Shawan Castelo-Branco, 2021 For decades ethnomusicologists across the world have considered how to affect positive change for the communities they work with Through illuminating case studies and reflections by a diverse array of scholars and practitioners Transforming Ethnomusicology aims to both expand dialogues about social engagement within ethnomusicology and at the same time transform how we understand ethnomusicology as a discipline The first volume of Transforming Ethnomusicology focuses on ethical practice and collaboration examining the power relations inherent in ethnography and offering new strategies for transforming institutions and ethnographic methods These reflections on the broader framework of ethnomusicological practice are complemented by case studies that document activist approaches to the study of music in challenging contexts of poverty discrimination and other unjust systems

Genetic Afterlives Noah Tamarkin, 2020-09-11 In 1997 M E R Mathivha an elder of the black Jewish Lemba people of South Africa announced to the Lemba Cultural Association that a recent DNA study substantiated their ancestral connections to Jews Lemba people subsequently leveraged their genetic test results to seek recognition from the post apartheid government as indigenous Africans with rights to traditional leadership and land retheorizing genetic ancestry in the process In Genetic Afterlives Noah Tamarkin illustrates how Lemba people give their own meanings to the results of DNA tests and employ them to manage competing claims of Jewish ethnic and religious identity African indigeneity and South African citizenship Tamarkin turns away from genetics researchers results that defined a single story of Lemba peoples true origins and toward Lemba understandings of their own genealogy as multivalent Guided by Lemba people s negotiations of their belonging as diasporic Jews South African citizens and indigenous Africans Tamarkin considers new ways to think about belonging that can acknowledge the importance of historical and sacred ties to land without valorizing autochthony borders or other technologies of exclusion
