Jamaica as it is Bessie Pullen-Burry, 1903 Jamaica As It Is, 1903 Bessie Pullen-Burry, Mandeville 1st January 1903 Our horizon is not limited by the things of time The expectation we entertain of a future life tends to make us view things in their true proportion These sentences were uttered last Sunday morning by the Assistant Bishop of Jamaica at the Parish Church of the little inland town of Mandeville of which he is also Rector The occasion which called forth his eloquent sermon upon the future life was the death of Dr Temple the late Archbishop of Canterbury The choice and scholarly English spoken by the Bishop together with the breadth of thought which characterised his views riveted my attention Looking round at the mixed congregation of whites and blacks I noted that the preacher had equally gained the attention of the dusky worshippers I wondered how much they understood of what he said and what they really looked for in the life to come for the creed must be simple if these grown up children are to learn and digest it I am told that a place where golden crowns will be placed upon their heads harps in their hands if they behave properly appeals to their imagination as do white robes to their sense of what constitutes decorous clothing for so great an occasion One can also imagine that the old fashioned doctrine of hell fire would not be without efficacy as a check upon the habits of the black when he inclines to revert to his former type Although the negro is naturally argumentative and litigious it will be many years before his brain adapts itself to the study of the deep things of theological casuistry One could scarcely expect him to grapple with the subtleties of the thirty nine Articles or as I have irreverently heard them called the forty stripes save one in his present evolutionary state of development My lot having fallen to me in a house overrun with Americans the dignified language of that morning s sermon and the sonorous tones of the preacher had come as balm to my afflicted ears If the virility energy and business capacities of our friends across the Atlantic are of world wide fame so honesty compels me to say are their bragging and their boasting When one is the only Briton amongst a crowd of Yankees the discordant nasal voices in which they discuss food and dollars from morning till night is apt to get on one s nerves However I did not come to Jamaica to write about Americans I am glad they visit this island in search of health and bring their much prized dollars with them for the good of the Commonwealth Two months have scarcely passed since I left my native shores Hosts of new experiences fresh sensations and interests have filled up the intervening weeks I had intended to write a diary instead I have made some progress down that path which is said to be paved with good intentions They say of the natives of these latitudes that they were born tired grew up tired and have been tired ever since I cannot truthfully say that of myself although the enervating climate tries the strongest when they feel tropical heat for the first time Energies which were rampant in the temperate zone find the end of their tether very soon under Jamaican skies Perhaps this is why the island is said to be beneficial to persons suffering from overdone nerves They must rest in the middle of the day the heat is too great for any real exertion I have not had much time to take notes but as I propose staying four weeks in this quiet spot I intend to gather together the mental fragments at present lying scattered about in that organ which for want of better knowledge I designate my brain pan and piece them together into something which may be of use to people contemplating a visit to Jamaica And I cannot help thinking if it were more generally known in England how easy it is to take such a trip and how much there is to reward one for the trouble many persons would be only too desirous of becoming acquainted with this lovely island When I told friends that I intended to visit Jamaica this winter I was amused at the hazy notion prevailing even amongst the well educated not only as to its geographical position but regarding life in general as it is lived out here One lady said to me I call it flying in the face of Providence to go so near those horrid volcanoes I meekly explained that Jamaica lay several hundred miles away but she went on to say Well I read in the papers the other day that an American geologist says that the Pel e catastrophe is only the beginning of the end Sooner or later all the West Indies will go There is no doubt that this feeling exists in some circles in England and I think the sooner accurate knowledge replaces panic stricken ignorance the better will it be for the colonists here and for English people obliged to escape from the rigours of a northern winter
