Handbook of Water and Wastewater Systems Protection Robert M. Clark, Simon Hakim, Avi Ostfeld, 2011-09-01 Following the events of 9 11 the Administrator of the US Environmental Protection Agency created the Water Protection Task Force WPTF which identified water and wastewater systems as a major area of vulnerability to deliberate attack The WPTF suggested that there are steps that can be taken to reduce these vulnerabilities and to make it as difficult as possible for potential saboteurs to succeed The WPTF recommended that be scrutinized with renewed vigor to secure water and wastewater systems against these possible threats It also recommended that water and wastewater systems have a response plan in place in the event an act of terrorism occurs The WPTF identified water distribution networks as an area of special vulnerability and highlighted the need for rapid on line detection methods that are accurate and have a wide detection range As a result of these recommendations novel technologies from various fields of science and engineering are now addressing water security issues and water and wastewater utilities are looking for innovative solutions Once such technologies are available there will be a rapid implementation process that will present many business opportunities for the private sector. However, in addition to terrorist threats, water and wastewater systems are inherently vulnerable to natural disasters such as earthquakes and floods. This volume will address the problems associated with both intended terrorist attacks and natural disasters affecting water or wastewater systems. The book is divided into parts based on the kinds of threats facing water and wastewater systems: 1 a direct attack on water and wastewater infrastructure storage reservoirs and distribution and collection networks; 2 a cyber attack disabling the functionality of the water and wastewater systems or taking over control of key components which might result in system failures; and 3 a deliberate chemical or biological contaminant injection at one of the water distribution system's nodes. It will examine unique plans, technological and managerial innovations for protecting such systems and includes descriptions of projects that were implemented to respond to natural disasters. Case studies are presented that discuss existing projects and evaluate their performance with an emphasis on providing guidelines and techniques that can be implemented by water and wastewater planners and managers to deal with natural and manmade disasters should they occur.

A Water Security Handbook, 2006 Risk Management of Water Supply and Sanitation Systems Petr Hlavinec, Cvetanka Popovska, Ivana Mahrikova, Tamara Kukharchyk, 2009-04-28

Each year more than 200 million people are affected by floods, tropical storms, droughts, earthquakes, and also operational failures, wars, terrorism, vandalism, and accidents involving hazardous materials. These are part of the wide variety of events that cause death, injury, and significant economic losses for the countries affected. In an environment where natural hazards are present, local actions are decisive in all stages of risk management: in the work of prevention and mitigation, in rehabilitation and reconstruction, and above all, in emergency response and the provision of basic services to the affected population. Commitment to systematic vulnerability reduction is crucial to ensure the resilience of communities and populations to the impact of natural and manmade hazards. Current challenges for the water and sanitation sector require an increase in sustainable access to water and sanitation services in residential areas where natural hazards pose the greatest risk. In settlements located on unstable and risk-prone land, there is growing environmental degradation coupled with extreme conditions of poverty that increase vulnerability. The development of local capacity and risk management play vital roles in obtaining sustainability of water and sanitation systems, as well as for the communities themselves. Unfortunately, water may also represent a potential target for terrorist activity or war conflict, and a deliberate contamination of water is a potential public health threat. An approach which considers the needs of communities and institutions is particularly important in urban areas affected by armed conflict. Risk management for large rehabilitation projects has to deal with major changes caused by conflict-damaged or destroyed infrastructure, increased population, corrupt or inefficient water utilities, and impoverished communities. Water supply and sanitation are amongst the first considerations in disaster response. The greatest water-borne risk to health in most emergencies is the transmission of faecal pathogens due to inadequate sanitation, hygiene, and protection of water sources. However, some disasters including those involving damage to chemical and nuclear industrial installations or involving volcanic activity may create acute problems from chemical or radiological water pollution Sanitation includes safe excreta disposal drainage of wastewater and rainwater solid waste disposal and vector control This book is based on the discussions and papers prepared for the NATO Advanced Research Workshop that took place in Ohrid Macedonia under the auspices of the NATO Security Through Science Programme and addressed problems Risk management of water supply and sanitation systems impaired by operational failures natural disasters and war conflicts The main purpose of the workshop was to critically assess the existing knowledge on Risk management of water supply and sanitation systems with respect to diverse conditions in participating countries and promote close co operation among scientists with different professional experience from different countries The ARW technical program comprised papers on 4 topics a Vulnerability of Wastewater and Sanitation Systems b Vulnerability of Drinking Water Systems c Emergency response plans and d Case studies from regions affected by Drinking Water System Wastewater and Sanitation System failures

Department of Homeland Security Bioterrorism Risk Assessment National Research Council,Division on Earth and Life Studies,Board on Life Sciences,Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences,Board on Mathematical Sciences and Their Applications,Committee on Methodological Improvements to the Department of Homeland Security's Biological Agent Risk Analysis,2009-01-03 The mission of Department of Homeland Security Bioterrorism Risk Assessment A Call for Change the book published in December 2008 is to independently and scientifically review the methodology that led to the 2006 Department of Homeland Security report Bioterrorism Risk Assessment BTRA and provide a foundation for future updates This book identifies a number of fundamental concerns with the BTRA of 2006 ranging from mathematical and statistical mistakes that have corrupted results to unnecessarily complicated probability models and models with fidelity far exceeding existing data to more basic questions about how terrorist behavior should be modeled Rather than merely criticizing what was done in the BTRA of 2006 this new NRC book consults outside experts and collects a number of proposed alternatives that could improve DHS's ability to assess potential terrorist behavior as a key element of risk informed decision making and it explains these alternatives in the specific context of the BTRA and the bioterrorism threat

Water and Food Security in the Arabian Gulf The Emirates Center for Strategic Studies and Research, 2018-10-10 Growing populations and economies have led to an increase in water demand around the globe. However, there are large variations in the amounts of water available to nations and regions and growing concern surrounding the uncertainty associated with these supplies due in large part to natural and human impacts on the water cycle. The need for alternative sources of fresh water has also been aggravated by the large influx of guest workers and significant improvements in the quality of life among Gulf populations. Therefore, supplies are augmented by alternative sources, mainly desalinization, which meets most of the needs of these countries. However, this comes at a great financial cost as it is an extremely energy intensive process and has associated security risks, but many still see desalination as the only viable means of ensuring water supply in the region. Global food security also faces an uncertain future. The Gulf states suffer from a substantial food gap and all the countries of the region are net food importers. The increase in the region's population, rising income levels, and harsh weather conditions that prevent the increase of local food production have resulted in a vast increase in the region's food imports. The ECSSR 17th Annual Conference Water and Food Security in the Arabian Gulf held at the Center on March 26-27, 2012, in Abu Dhabi, and the resultant papers contained in this volume provide a detailed investigation of the food and water security challenges facing the region. They explore water and food resource management strategies and policies in the Gulf states, the global geopolitics of water security, future demand trends in the Arabian Gulf region, and the particular challenges faced by the UAE in ensuring a reliable supply of food and water in the coming decades.
