Tend the Olive, Water the Vine Rachel Christina, 2006-08-01 Current international development wisdom promotes the inclusion of non governmental organizations NGOs in national level policy making in the interest of strengthening state civil society relationships supporting locally driven culturally sensitive development and contributing to program and policy innovation However critics of increased state NGO donor collaboration argue that it actually dilutes the power of NGOs to act in the interest of the local populations they were established to serve This tension between the local and the global is connected to broader debates about the nature and role of contemporary educational development Should education aim primarily at preparing citizens for participation in the global economy thereby encouraging the integration of nation states into a world economic system driven by the industrialized North Or and should it endeavor to develop in students and in communities North and South the ability to critique resist and transform that world system Ultimately this is a question of who owns development international agencies and institutions or the communities being developed This book examines the complexities of these negotiations in a particularly complicated and volatile context Palestine and a particularly hot development field early childhood development The international community's efforts to support early childhood programming in the developing world fall more broadly within the empowerment camp than do other development efforts and in this case in particular serve as a source of important lessons about the dynamics of donor state NGO relationships suggestions for improved development policy and insights into forms of education which promote justice and equity in an increasingly interdependent world
