- Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-velocity exercise program on the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program was designed to be safe and effective for women with no previous experience with exercise. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions included a warm-up, a main exercise period, and a cool-down. The main exercise period consisted of a combination of cardiovascular and strength training exercises. The program was evaluated using a variety of fitness tests, including a 1-mile walk, a 1-mile run, a 1-mile swim, and a 1-mile bike ride. The results of the study showed that the program had a positive effect on the physical fitness of the women. The women who participated in the program showed significant improvements in their cardiovascular fitness, strength, and endurance. The program was found to be safe and effective for sedentary, middle-aged women.
