Dynamics of Smart Systems and Structures Vicente Lopes Junior, Valder Steffen Jr., Marcelo Amorim Savi, 2016-06-03 Written by a team of experts that has been working together for several years in the context of a research network involving international institutions this book brings several applications related to smart material systems such as vibration and noise control structural health monitoring energy harvesting and shape memory alloys Furthermore this book also provides basic knowledge on the fundamentals of smart material systems and structures Consequently the present title serves as an important resource for advanced undergraduate and graduate students In addition it serves as a guide for engineers and scientists working with smart structures and materials both with an application and basic research perspective Smart material systems and structures represent a new paradigm which is increasing the capabilities of engineering systems Adaptability and versatility are some important aspects related to such systems In brief research on smart materials is characterized by synergistically combining different physical features such as mechanical electrical chemical and magnetic As a result smart material technologies have a huge potential to enhance the performance of engineering structures opening unlimited opportunities to innovation and economic benefits

Multifunctional Lightweight Structures Lothar Kroll, 2023-03-28 This book presents key research findings on the combination of different technologies that promise to be particularly sustainable and broadly impactful in their application The findings were compiled during the course of the first funding period for the MERGE Cluster of Excellence New methods potential solutions and exemplary pilot applications take center stage as the text explores the next generation of functional integration via lightweight structures The underlying manufacturing processes are based on textile polymer and metal processing techniques all of which are suitable for large batch production flexibility and reproducibility

Cellular and molecular mechanisms of motor neuron death in amyotrophic lateral sclerosis Ricardo Tapia, 2015-02-11 Amyotrophic lateral sclerosis ALS which was described since 1869 by Jean Martin Charcot is a devastating neurodegenerative disease characterized by the selective and progressive loss of upper and lower motor neurons of the cerebral cortex brainstem and the spinal cord The cognitive process is not affected and is not merely the result of aging because may occur at young ages The only known cause of the disease is associated with genetic mutations mainly in the gene encoding superoxide dismutase 1 familial ALS whereas there is no known cause of the sporadic form of ALS SALS which comprises 90% of cases Both ALS types develop similar histopathological and clinical characteristics and there is no treatment or prevention of the disease Because effective treatments for ALS as for other neurodegenerative diseases can only result from the knowledge of their cellular and molecular pathophysiological mechanisms research on such mechanisms is essential Although progress in neurochemical physiological and clinical investigations in the last decades has identified several mechanisms that seem to be involved in the cell death process such as glutamate mediated excitotoxicity alterations of inhibitory circuits inflammatory events axonal transport deficits oxidative stress mitochondrial dysfunction and energy failure the understanding of the origin and temporal progress of the disease is still incomplete and insufficient Clearly there is a need of further experimental models and approaches to discern the importance of such mechanisms and to discover the factors that determine the selective death of motor neurons characteristic of ALS in contrast to other neurodegenerative diseases such as Parkinson s and Alzheimer s disease Whereas studies in vitro in cell cultures tissue slices or organotypic preparations can give useful information regarding cellular and molecular mechanisms the experiments in living animal models obviously reflect more closely the situation in the human disease provided that the symptoms and their development during time mimics as close as possible those of the human disease It is necessary to correlate the experimental findings in vitro with those in vivo as well as those obtained in genetic models with those in non genetic models aiming at designing and testing therapeutic strategies based on the results obtained
