Stanton, 2013-04-23 Ergonomics often seems to be involved too late in commercial project development processes to have substantive impact on design and usability However in the automotive industry and specifically in relation to In Vehicle Information Systems IVIS a lack of attention to usability can not only lead to poor customer satisfaction it can also present a significant risk to safe and efficient driving Usability Evaluation for In Vehicle Systems describes how to apply a range of usability evaluation methods for IVIS The authors explore the driving context and the range of driver IVIS interactions using case studies that show how Ergonomics methods can add considerable value throughout the product development process They emphasize practical approaches that can be used to predict and analyze driver behavior with IVIS The authors also present validation evidence for the methods covered The book has three key objectives Define and understand usability in the context of IVIS This guides the specification of criteria against which usability can be successfully evaluated Develop a multi method framework to support designers in the evaluation of IVIS usability The underlying motivations for the framework are a need for early stage evaluation to support proactive redesign and a practical and realistic approach which can be used successfully by automotive manufacturers Develop an analytic usability evaluation method which enables useful predictions of task interaction whilst accounting for the specific context of use of IVIS The major challenge of this particular context of use is the dual task environment created by interacting with secondary tasks via an IVIS at the same time as driving Written for students researchers designers and engineers the book is not only a guide to the practical application of evaluation methods it also presents important theoretical concepts and hypotheses describing the behavior of drivers and the effects of IVIS interactions It provides a framework for developing more usable systems to enhance the overall driving experience by meeting the needs of the driver safety efficiency and enjoyment Focus On: 100 Most Popular Station Wagons Wikipedia contributors, 12th

Using Neurophysiological Signals that Reflect Cognitive or Affective State Anne-Marie Brouwer, Thorsten O. Zander, Jan B. F. van Erp, 2015-07-27 What can we learn from spontaneously occurring brain and other physiological signals about an individual's cognitive and affective state and how can we make use of this information One line of research that is actively involved with this question is Passive Brain Computer Interfaces BCI To date most BCIs are aimed at assisting patients for whom brain signals could form an alternative output channel as opposed to more common human output channels like speech and moving the hands However brain signals possibly in combination with other physiological signals also form an output channel above and beyond the more usual ones they can potentially provide continuous online information about an individual's cognitive and affective state without the need of conscious or effortful communication The provided information could be used in a number of ways Examples include monitoring cognitive workload through EEG and skin conductance for adaptive automation or using ERPs in response to errors to correct for a behavioral response While Passive BCIs make use of online neurophysiological responses and close the interaction cycle between a user and a computer system neurophysiological responses can also be used in an offline fashion Examples of this include detecting amygdala responses for neuromarketing and measuring EEG and pupil dilation as indicators of mental effort for optimizing information systems The described field of applied neurophysiology can strongly benefit from high quality scientific studies that control for confounding factors and use proper comparison conditions Another area of relevance is ethics ranging from dubious product claims acceptance of the technology by the general public privacy of users to possible effects that these kinds of applications may have on society as a whole In this Research Topic we aimed to publish studies of the highest scientific quality that are directed towards applications that utilize spontaneously effortlessly generated neurophysiological signals brain and or other physiological signals reflecting cognitive or affective state We especially welcomed studies that describe specific real world applications demonstrating a significant benefit compared to standard applications We also invited original new kinds of proposed applications in this area as well as comprehensive review articles that point out what is and what is not possible according to scientific standards in this field Finally we welcomed manuscripts on the ethical issues that are involved Connected to the Research Topic was a workshop held on June 6 during the Fifth International Brain Computer Interface Meeting June 3 7 2013 Asilomar California that brought together a diverse group of people who were working in this field We discussed the state of the art and formulated major challenges as reflected in the first paper of the Research Topic
