Carl E. Schneider,2015-04-24 An argument that the system of boards that license human subject research is so fundamentally misconceived that it inevitably does more harm than good Medical and social progress depend on research with human subjects When that research is done in institutions getting federal money it is regulated often minutely by federally required and supervised bureaucracies called institutional review boards IRBs Do can these IRBs do more harm than good In The Censor s Hand Schneider addresses this crucial but long unasked question Schneider answers the question by consulting a critical but ignored experience the law s learning about regulation and by amassing empirical evidence that is scattered around many literatures He concludes that IRBs were fundamentally misconceived Their usefulness to human subjects is doubtful but they clearly delay distort and deter research that can save people s lives soothe their suffering and enhance their welfare IRBs demonstrably make decisions poorly They cannot be expected to make decisions well for they lack the expertise ethical principles legal rules effective procedures and accountability essential to good regulation And IRBs are censors in the place censorship is most damaging universities In sum Schneider argues that IRBs are bad regulation that inescapably do more harm than good They were an irreparable mistake that should be abandoned so that research can be conducted properly and regulated sensibly
