Beghetto,Giovanni Emanuele

Corazza,2019-01-17 This edited volume provides a venue for scholars whose work challenges the typical static conceptions and methods of studying creativity More specifically the book will serve as an effort to introduce more dynamic definitions conceptions and approaches for studying creativity in the context of educational practice By doing so it feeds the strong contemporary need for more dynamic conceptions of creativity in educational settings This is particularly important given the fast evolution of modern society and the widespread consensus that efforts to develop creative potential should be democratized extending well beyond the boundaries of the gifted subset and the walls of the classroom This work recognizes that more dynamic perspectives on creativity are necessary for understanding its complexity value and meaning in educational contexts Green Cultural Criminology Avi Brisman,Nigel South,2014-06-05 Over the last two decades green criminology has emerged as a unique area of study bringing together criminologists and sociologists from a wide range of research backgrounds and varying theoretical orientations It spans the micro to the macro from individual level environmental crimes and victimization to business corporate violations and state transgressions There have been few attempts however to explicitly or implicitly integrate cultural criminology into green criminology or vice versa This book moves towards articulating a green cultural criminological perspective Brismar and South examine existing overlapping research and offer a platform to support future excursions by green criminologists into cultural criminology's concern with media images and representations consumerism and consumption and resistance At the same time they offer an invitation to cultural criminologists to adopt a green view of the consumption landscape and the growth and depictions of environmental harms Green Cultural Criminology is aimed at students academics criminologists and sociologists with an interest in green criminology and cultural criminology two of the most exciting new areas in criminology today

Religion and Human Rights John Witte, M. Christian Green, 2012 The relationship between religion and human rights is both complex and inextricable While most of the world's religions have supported violence repression and prejudice each has also played a crucial role in the modern struggle for universal human rights Most importantly religions provide the essential sources and scales of dignity and responsibility shame and respect restraint and regret restitution and reconciliation that a human rights regime needs to survive and flourish in any culture This volume provides authoritative examinations of the contributions to human rights of Judaism Christianity Islam Hinduism Confucianism Buddhism and indigenous religions Each chapter grapples with the concept and origins of human rights and offers insight into the major human rights issues that confront religious individuals and communities These include core issues of freedom of religious conscience choice exercise expression association morality and self-determination They also include analysis of the roles of religious ideas and institutions in the cultivation and abridgement of rights of women children and minorities and rights to peace orderly development and protection of nature and the environment With contributions by a score of leading experts Religion and Human Rights provides authoritative and accessible assessments of the contributions of Judaism Christianity Islam Hinduism Confucianism Buddhism and Indigenous religions to the development of the ideas and institutions of human rights It also probes the major human rights issues that confront religious individuals and communities around the world today and the main challenges that the world's religions will pose to the human rights regime in the future
