

"Something was on my trail, and it was feeling it..."

"I stood like a stone sentinel, still seeing in the ground what I had sensed. There suddenly I saw it. There was movement among the bushes at the far end of the clearing. A great dark shadow slung itself and leaped on me in the moonlight. I am "bigger" actually, so the beast moved, springing along in a sort of pouncing upon its powerful hind legs, while its head and neck held out a line of its long, stiff, scaly neck and jaws, but its movements, in spite of its bulk, were exceedingly sure. Its head came out the bushes, wings of its great body spread out, and then this was one of the great Redoubtable, almost the most terrible beast which has ever walked the earth.

"The only possible chance for its flight, flying over my water gap, I at once made such a half circle as I have never done before or since. For a moment I thought that I had thrown him off. The path lay all behind me, but then suddenly came a rushing and a crashing, a clattering of great feet and a pouncing of scaly legs, so that now again the beast came. He was at my very heels. I sat low.

"The moonlight shone upon his huge pouncing form, the rest of darkness hid in the open woods, and the growing shape of dawn upon the dark, purple horizon. With a scream of rage I turned and rushed wildly over the path behind me the thick, jutting branching of the crooked scrawled trunk and under its low horizontal was hidden my heavy mass. I expected to feel the grip upon my back.

The Redoubtable, the most powerful of the great beasts, was the most common of the great beasts. It was a creature of the most common of the great beasts, and its name was the most common of the great beasts.
