

CASE STUDIES

There are a great many ways of writing a case study, so starting one can be frustrating just figuring out what format to use.

For our case studies, the focus is on how in-mold labeling or in-mold decorating solved a technical or business problem in the packaging or durable products industry. There is no requirement to divulge proprietary information but do consider that your case study may be read by a potential customer. A well written case study is an excellent opportunity to show prospective customers that your company has mastered IML/IMD and can deliver cost effective results for them.

Ideally your case study should not be a long winded hard sell. It should be two or three pages and 500 – 900 words, although some tend to run longer. Use graphics to illustrate your information but don't go overboard.

IMDA has developed a final format that shows off our case studies to best advantage.

How to Structure Your Case Study

The typical case study has four parts:

1. Situation, Background or Introduction – This is the opening section that describes the reason for the case study, including the business or product line, product usage, current decoration method and market position. Here is where you set the stage for the parts to come next.
2. Problem – This section states the main problem which needs to be resolved, such as failure of the current decorating method, inadequate service life, excessive costs, etc. Previous attempts at solution that failed can also be addressed here.
3. Solution – This is the heart of the document. It describes the solution in detail, how IML or IMD solved the problem, what changes were made to the manufacturing process, the impact on the cost and end use of the product, methodologies and other factors that contributed to the overall deployment. Some case studies include sidebars, charts and graphs to illustrate key points.
4. Evaluation – In this section recap the main benefits of the solution and the impact on the product's value and function.

Support for the conceptual design stage of effective and resource-efficient offerings Sergio Brambila, 2020-10-20 Human activities in the form of production and consumption have increased to an all time high In many cases this increase has resulted in environmental problems such as waste and pollution that in turn affect our health and way of living Societies have proposed different measures to address such environmental problems These range from different waste treatment technologies to alternative business models policy measures and lifecycle thinking in the design of products to mention but a few In this research the focus is on supporting early design activities of what is often called the conceptual design stage with the objective to provide effective and resource efficient offerings The early design activities considered here are planning analysis and evaluation Design researchers have largely supported these three activities with a variety of methods and tools However previous research has shown that design support coming from academia has had a low uptake in industry In this regard the aim of this research is to propose not only useful but also usable support for design practitioners during the conceptual design stage This research is carried out in the manufacturing sector in Sweden where selected companies expressed an interest in collaborating with academia to address more thoroughly effective and resource efficient offerings To better match company needs and research from academia this research took a pragmatic and cross disciplinary approach This research approach along with literature reviews semi structured interviews workshops and questionnaires shows different ways in which support can be made more useful and usable The main gap addressed here is that the knowledge and the related skills of the user of the support have not been sufficiently explored The results include requirements of the user of the support proposed methods and tools derived from the requirements identified and most importantly the knowledge and skills needed by the user of the support The main message of this research is that support could be expanded from methods and tools to include knowledge and skills needed by design practitioners the users of support The flow of support from academia to industry could also be reinforced in a two way flow through a pragmatic and cross disciplinary approach to first and foremost address design practitioners needs
