Mithaug, Deidre K. Mithaug, 2007 This book describes a method of teaching that fosters autonomous learning in all students including students with disabilities The pedagogy is based on decades of research on strategy instruction as well as on a theory of learning that claims these four conditions promote self determined learning in all learners 1 opportunities to choose expectations for gaining something from a learning challenge 2 strategies that regulate responses to meet those expectations 3 comparisons between results and expectations that provoke additional adjustment in expectations and responses and 4 persistent engagement and adjustment until results match expectations The pedagogy of self instruction described in this book anchors these conditions in everyday instruction so students can learn by adjusting to their own expectations Chapter 1 compares this approach to the teacher directed methods of direct instruction that require teachers to set expectations for students control how students respond to them evaluate the outcomes they produce and then prescribe adjustments students must make to improve Chapter 2 provides evidence that too much of special education instruction reflects this teacher directed approach and as a consequence discourages students from learning how to learn on their own Chapters 3 6 identify four ways to shift learning control from teachers to students and Chapters 7 and 8 identify the obstacles to achieving this instructional shift in special education The appendices of the book provide a bibliography of research on self instruction and direct instruction pedagogies and a validated self assessment that can evaluate the directedness of your teaching The Practical Guide to High-Leverage Practices in Special Education Ruby L. Ellen A. Brantlinger, 2006-08-15 Who Benefits From Special Education Remediating Fixing Other People's Children addresses the negative consequences of labeling and separating education for students with disabilities the cultural biases inherent in the way that we view children's learning difficulties the social construction of disability the commercialization of special education and related issues The theme that unifies the chapters is that tension exists between professional ideology and practice and the wishes and expectations of the recipients of professional practice children adolescents and adults with disabilities and their families These voices have rarely taken center stage in formulating important decisions about the quality and characteristics of appropriate practice The dominant view in the field of special education has been that disability is a problem in certain children rather than an artifact that results from the general structure of schooling it does not take into consideration the voices of people with disabilities their families or their teachers Offering an alternative perspective this book deconstructs mainstream special education ideologies and highlights the personal perspectives of students families and front line professionals such as teachers and mental health personnel It is particularly relevant for special education disabilities studies graduate students and faculty and for readers in general education curriculum studies instruction theory and critical theory Teaching Students With Special Needs in Inclusive Classrooms Diane P.
