

Thatcher's choice in the big Tory split

THATCHER, Threatened

By TERENCE LANCASTER
THE Tory Party is split on Falklands Islands policy with Premier Margaret Thatcher and Foreign Secretary Francis Pym on an opposite collision course.

A cry of "Sell-out" by a Conservative MP summed up the anguish of right-wingers when Mr Pym was speaking in the Commons last night.

His speech contrasted with a robust performance by Mrs Thatcher earlier in the day.

Her words to her Government's original guns sounded when Argentina invaded the island, six weeks ago today.

But Mr Pym was in a more conciliatory mood. He set down as the aim of his speech to attract total support from the Tories—and others from Labour.

What is obvious is that in the negotiations at the United Nations, Britain is prepared to make more concessions than Mrs Thatcher admitted.

If these concessions are enough to buy off the Argentines for the time being then Mrs Thatcher will be accused of a sell-out.

But there is only one alternative to a sell-out, the withdrawal of the UK. And that is a dead end.

There was a warning in Westminster last night that the Government is prepared to go as far as the Falklands, but not as far as the search for peace.

Former Premier Edward Heath, aged 80, said on the Falklands, "I would not want to see a settlement from now on."

He indicated his former support for suspending the UK's sovereignty could not yield any possible agreement.

Then he advised Mr Pym to ignore newspapers which said the UK's time would not have run out.

A growing number of Tory MPs believe that the Government is ready for a Falklands showdown.

Mrs Thatcher said last night: "We are working for a peaceful settlement, but a peaceful settlement."
