

Establishing an effective energy industry response to Ebola

The World Health Organisation (WHO) is creating a global network of experts to help countries deal with Ebola, including the UK.

Dr Brian Oliver

After months of reports, Ebola continues to infect an increasing number of people in West Africa. The World Health Organisation (WHO) has confirmed the presence of the virus in Guinea, Liberia, and Sierra Leone, and has urged the international community to help contain the spread of the disease.

While the full impact on the industry is yet to be seen, the energy sector is likely to be affected by the outbreak. This is evidenced by the increasing number of calls from businesses, particularly in the oil and gas sector, for advice on how to protect their operations and staff from the disease.

Recent advice
The WHO has issued advice on how to protect people from the disease, including advice on how to protect staff and visitors to the affected areas.

Businesses are advised to take steps to protect their staff and visitors, including avoiding contact with people who are sick, and avoiding contact with people who have been in contact with sick people.

While the risk of contracting the disease is low, the potential impact on the industry is significant.

Businesses should consider the following advice:

There is a danger that those who do not have the disease, but are displaying similar symptoms, which can include fever, headache, muscle aches, and general weakness, will be mistaken for those who do have the disease, leading to the spread of the disease.

The WHO strongly advises businesses not to send staff to the affected areas, including Liberia, Sierra Leone, and Guinea.

"We also strongly advise non-essential personnel to defer travel to Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone"

World Health Organisation (WHO) has issued advice on how to protect people from the disease.

Avoidance advice
If possible, do not travel to the affected areas, including Liberia, Sierra Leone, and Guinea.

- If you have been in contact with someone who has the disease, avoid contact with them.
- If you have been in contact with someone who has the disease, avoid contact with them.
- If you have been in contact with someone who has the disease, avoid contact with them.
