Anchored in Place Bank, Leslie,Cloete, Nico,2018-11-05 Tensions in South African universities have traditionally centred around equity particularly access and affordability historical legacies such as apartheid and colonialism and the shape and structure of the higher education system What has not received sufficient attention is the contribution of the university to place based development This volume is the first in South Africa to engage seriously with the place based developmental role of universities In the international literature and policy there has been an increasing integration of the university with place based development especially in cities This volume weighs in on the debate by drawing attention to the place based roles and agency of South African universities in their local towns and cities It acknowledges that universities were given specific development roles in regions homelands and towns under apartheid and comments on why sub national place based development has not been a key theme in post apartheid higher education planning Given the developmental crisis in the country universities could be expected to play a more constructive and meaningful role in the development of their own precincts cities and regions But what should that role be Is there evidence that this is already occurring in South Africa despite the lack of a national policy framework What plans and programmes are in place and what is needed to expand the development agency of universities at the local level Who and what might be involved Where should the focus lie and who might benefit most and why Is there a need perhaps to approach the challenges of college towns secondary cities and metropolitan centers differently This book poses some of these questions as it considers the experiences of a number of South African universities including Wits Pretoria Nelson Mandela University and especially Fort Hare as one of its post centenary challenges

Phage Therapy: Past, Present and Future Stephen T. Abedon, Pilar García, Peter Mullany, Rustam Aminov, 2017-09-05 Historically the first observation of a transmissible lytic agent that is specifically active against a bacterium Bacillus anthracis was by a Russian microbiologist Nikolay Gamaleya in 1898 At that time however it was too early to make a connection to another discovery made by Dmitri Ivanovsky in 1892 and Martinus Beijerinck in 1898 on a non bacterial pathogen infecting tobacco plants Thus the viral world was discovered in two of the three domains of life and our current understanding is that viruses represent the most abundant biological entities on the planet The potential of bacteriophages for infection treatment have been recognized after the discoveries by Frederick Twort and Felix d H relle in 1915 and 1917 Subsequent phage therapy developments however have been overshadowed by the remarkable success of antibiotics in infection control and treatment and phage therapy research and development persisted mostly in the former Soviet Union countries Russia and Georgia as well as in France and Poland The dramatic rise of antibiotic resistance and especially of multi drug resistance among human and animal bacterial pathogens however challenged the position of antibiotics as a single most important pillar for infection control and treatment Thus there is a renewed interest in phage therapy as a possible additive alternative therapy especially for the infections that resist routine antibiotic treatment The basis for the revival of phage therapy is affected by a number of issues that need to be resolved before it can enter the arena which is traditionally reserved for antibiotics Probably the most important is the regulatory issue How should phage therapy be regulated Similarly to drugs Then the co evolving nature of phage bacterial host relationship will be a major hurdle for the production of consistent phage formulae Or should we resort to the phage products such as lysins and the corresponding engineered versions in order to have accurate and consistent delivery doses We still have very limited knowledge about the pharmacodynamics of phage therapy More data obtained in animal models are necessary to evaluate the phage therapy efficiency compared for example to antibiotics Another aspect is the safety of phage therapy How do phages interact with the immune system and to what costs or benefits What are the risks in the course of phage therapy of transduction of undesirable properties such as virulence or antibiotic resistance genes How frequent is the development of bacterial host resistance during phage therapy Understanding these and many other aspects of phage therapy basic and applied is the main subject of this Topic

Agribusiness competitiveness: Applying analytics, typology, and measurements to Africa Shishodia, Mahika, Babu, Suresh Chandra, 2017-07-02 Agribusiness has a major role to play in the transformation of the agricultural sector in Africa. With the demand for high value food products increasing around the world, the production and export of these goods represents an opportunity to achieve increases in income and employment. To capture the benefits of this trend and capitalize on this opportunity for long term agricultural growth, agribusiness in Africa must become more competitive. In addition to improving competitiveness, increasing agricultural productivity and food security are also major challenges in African agricultural development. In this paper, we compare the agribusiness competitiveness of African countries and develop typologies connected with their food security and agricultural productivity status. The typologies reveal various stylized facts on the competitiveness of agribusiness to help nations prioritize issues for agricultural development and growth. We develop the measures of agribusiness competitiveness and apply them to African countries. Additionally, we present policy implications and lessons for increasing the competitiveness of agribusiness in African countries.
