Curriculum studies is at the core of the educational endeavour and informs what happens in every educational institution As a result of its criticality or primacy every educational practitioner appears to claim expertise in curriculum matters and what direction the field should take In Africa the curriculum practitioner has been given little or no space to theorise and orient the future of the field in Africa Instead European and American curriculum theorists have been allowed to exert a marked influence on the nature and direction of African theoretical and philosophical underpinnings This situation raises fundamental questions about the future of education in Africa and this volume explores and answers these questions relating to curriculum theory theorising and the theoriser by breaking traditions and experimenting on alternative approaches and pathways Contributors are Aruna Ankiah Gangadeen Lynn Biggs Eunice Champion Taryn Isaacs De Vega Kehdinga George Fomunyam Nadaraj Govender Angela James Simon Bheki Khoza Noma China Kubashe Nehemiah Latolla Jacqui L ck Dumisa Celumusa Mabuza Simeon Maile Suriamurthe Maistry Makhulu A Makumane Zvisinei Moyo Cedric Bheki Mpungose Pascal

Cotula,2013-07-11 Over the past few years large scale land acquisitions in Africa have stoked controversy making headlines in media reports across the world Land that only a short time ago seemed of little outside interest is now being sought by international investors to the tune of hundreds of thousands of hectares Private sector expectations of higher world food and commodity prices and government concerns about longer term national food and energy security have both made land a more attractive asset Dubbed land grabs in the media large scale land acquisitions have become one of the most talked about and contentious topics amongst those studying working in or writing about Africa Some commentators have welcomed this trend as a bearer of new livelihood opportunities Others have countered by pointing to negative social impacts including loss of local land rights threats to local food security and the risk that large scale investments may marginalize family farming Lorenzo Cotula a leading expert in the field casts a critical eye over the most reliable evidence on this hotly contested topic examining the implications of land deals in Africa both for its people and for world agriculture and food security The Illustrated London News ,1871 English Mechanic and World of Science ,1899 Native and Non-Native Teachers in linguistics and L2 teaching literature the controversial issue of non nativeness still remains unresolved Contemporary critical research has questioned the theoretical foundations of the nativeness paradigm which still exerts a strong influence in the language teaching profession Written by well known researchers and teacher educators from all over the world both NSs and NNSs the selected contributions of this volume cover a great variety of aspects related to the professional role and status of both NS and NNS teachers in terms of both perceived differences and professional concerns and challenges The strongest aspects of this volume are the global perspectives and the implications for future research and teacher education It is precisely this international perspective which makes this volume illustrative of different realities with a similar objective in mind the improvement of second language teaching and teacher education In today s world being a NS or NNS should not really matter but rather teachers professional competences This publication thus provides a forum of reflection and discussion for all L2 educators who need to be aware of how much they might offer to their future students
