

Friction is a force that impedes motion by its resistive nature. This resistance will generally oppose the direction of motion causing problems that involve static friction and sliding friction. Most friction is the result. Friction may actually slow you and destroy. Sliding friction is the friction between two sliding surfaces.

I. Calculating Friction

In the following figure, a force F is applied to an object. This force is applied to the distance $F \cdot d$ which gives:

Let's say the normal force, F_N , is equal to the force pushing the object down together.

Let's say the equation for sliding friction:

(Equation)

$$\text{Friction Force (N)} = \mu F_N \quad \text{Coefficient of Friction} \quad \text{Normal Force (N)}$$

In this equation:

- 1) F_N is force of normal.
- 2) μ is coefficient of friction.
- 3) F_f is friction force which opposing together.

Example: A car is sliding along on a surface is equal to 0.1. The coefficient of friction is 0.1. How much friction is required to stop the car sliding?

$$\begin{aligned} F_f &= \mu F_N \\ F_f &= 0.1 \cdot 1000 \text{ N} \\ F_f &= 100 \text{ N} \end{aligned}$$

In this example, F_f must be greater than 100 N.

II. Static Friction

Static friction prevents and stops your motion in the following way: "When there is no motion of force is needed." This is the static while the surface remains stationary.

- 1) A force is applied to the surface, pushing the object of a force. If the applied force is right, the surface will remain stationary. Friction for the surface is 0. How much force is required to move the object?
