

I know one of the best ways to control the cost of your car is to buy it right—first you can take advantage of the 30- to 45-month-long, no-down-payment lease programs that many manufacturers offer. These programs are great if you really intend to use the car for only a few years. But if you plan to keep the car for more than five years, you may want to consider a lease with a purchase option. This way you can lease the car for a set period of time, and then you can buy it at a price that's usually less than the car's current market value. And if you don't want to buy the car, you can just return it to the dealer at the end of the lease. This way you can avoid the depreciation loss that you would incur if you bought the car and then sold it before you had it for five years.
