Chapter 2

Introduction to Financial Statement Analysis

- 2-1. In a firm's annual report, five financial statements can be found: the balance sheet, the income statement, the statement of cash flows, the statement of stockholders' equity, and the statement of comprehensive income. Financial statements in the annual report are required to be audited by a neutral third party, who checks and ensures that the financial statements are prepared according to GAAP (or IFRS) and that the information contained is reliable.
- 2-2. Users of financial statements include present and potential investors, financial analysts, and other interested outside parties (such as lenders, suppliers and other trade creditors, and customers). Financial managers within the firm also use the financial statements when making financial decisions.
Investors: Investors are concerned with the risk inherent in and return provided by their investments. Bondholders use the firm's financial statements to assess the ability of the company to make its debt payments. Shareholders use the statements to assess the firm's profitability and ability to make future dividend payments. Financial analysts: Financial analysts gather financial information, analyze it, and make recommendations. They read financial statements to determine a firm's value and project future earnings, so that they can provide guidance to businesses and individuals to help them with their investment decisions.
Managers: Managers use financial statement to look at trends in their own business, and to compare their own results with that of competitors.
- 2-3. Each method will help find the same filings. Yahoo finance also provides some analysis such as charts and key statistics. For Canadian filings, www.sedar.com is the preferred source.
- 2-4.
- Long-term liabilities would decrease by $20 million, and cash would decrease by the same amount. The book value of equity would be unchanged.
