Wced Past Papers Life Orientation:

The Biopolitics of Water Sofie Hellberg, 2018-03-28 Biopolitics refers to a form of politics concerned with administering and regulating the conditions of life at an aggregated level of populations. This book provides a biopolitical perspective on water governance and its effects. It draws on the work of Foucault to explore how notions of scarcity are used in strategies of governance and how such governance differentiates between different populations. Furthermore, the author investigates what such biopolitical regulation means for people's lifestyles and the way they understand themselves and their moral responsibilities as humans, individuals, and citizens. The book begins by investigating the global water agenda with a particular emphasis on its focus on water for basic needs and provides different examples of hydromentalities around the world. It also presents rich empirical details of one local case in South Africa. By carefully exploring the water stories of water users, the book provides new perspectives on the relationship between water and power. Additionally, it offers an innovative methodological framework through which we can study the workings of governance more generally and water governance specifically. It thereby contributes to the scholarship on water governance in relation to how water governance and technologies are part of producing subjectivities, notions of life and lifestyles, and more specifically how the global water agenda can work so as to produce or further entrench distinctions between different lives and lifestyles. Ultimately, such differences between individuals and populations that are produced as an effect of water governance are assessed in relation to social sustainability.

Identity, Trauma, Sensitive and Controversial Issues in the Teaching of History Hilary Cooper, Jon Nichol, 2015-10-13 History Education is a politically contested subject. It can be used to both promote xenophobia and to develop critical thinking, multiple perspectives, and tolerance. Accordingly, this book critically examines complex issues and constructivist approaches that make history relevant to students' understanding of the modern world. As such, it has global appeal, especially in North and South America, Canada, Europe, and Asia. The book's authors address the major challenges that History Education faces in an era of globalisation, digital revolution, and international terrorism, nationalism, and sectarian and religious conflict and warfare. Central to this volume are controversial issues: trauma and questions of personal and national identity from a wide range of international settings and perspectives. The research in this book was undertaken by leading history educators from every continent. Their interdisciplinary research represents an important contribution to the teaching of social sciences, social psychology, civic education, programmes, history, and history education in schools, colleges, and universities. The book offers new approaches to history educators at all levels. In addition, the chapters offer potential as required reading for students to both develop an international perspective and to compare and contrast their own situations with those that the book covers. Section I considers issues related to identity: how can history education promote social coherence in multicultural societies, in societies divided by sectarianism, or countries adapting to regime changes, whether Communist or Fascist, including for example South Africa, previously Communist countries of Eastern Europe and previous dictatorships in South America and Western Europe It discusses such questions as How important is it that students learn the content of history through the processes of historical enquiry What should that content be and who should decide it educators or politicians What is the role of textbooks and who should write and select them Should history be taught as a discrete discipline or as part of a citizenship or social sciences curriculum Sections II and III explore ways in which memory of sensitive issues related to the past to war or to massacres may be addressed Are there new methodologies or approaches which make this possible How can students understand situations involving intolerance and injustice

The 'Ecosystem Approach' in International Environmental Law Vito De Lucia, 2019-03-28 The ecosystem approach broadly understood as a legal and governance strategy for integrated environmental and biodiversity management has been adopted within a wide variety of international environmental legal regimes and provides a narrative a policy approach and in some cases legally binding obligations for States to implement what has been called a new paradigm of environmental management In this last respect the ecosystem approach is also often considered to offer an opportunity to move beyond the outdated anthropocentric framework underpinning much of international environmental law thus helping re think law in the Anthropocene Against this background this book addresses the question of whether the ecosystem approach represents a paradigm shift in international environmental law and governance or whether it is in conceptual and operative continuity with legal modernity This central question is explored through a combined genealogical and biopolitical framework which reveals how the ecosystem approach is the result of multiple contingencies and contestations and of the interplay of divergent and sometimes irreconcilable ideological projects The ecosystem approach this books shows does not have a univocal identity and must be understood as both signalling the potential for a decisive shift in the philosophical orientation of law and the operationalisation of a biopolitical framework of control that is in continuity with and even intensifies the eco destructive tendencies of legal modernity It is however in revealing this disjunction that the book opens up the possibility of moving beyond the already tired assessment of environmental law through the binary of anthropocentrism and ecocentrism

Sustainable Consumer Services

Minna Halme, 2012-05-16 The goal for consumer oriented business should be to make a profit and to do it without costing the Earth Yet exactly how to satisfy the needs and wants of consumers without contributing to environmental degradation is proving to be the essential but elusive goal for businesses in the 21st century The leading solution is to substitute material consumption with the consumption of services that offer consumers convenience and value but eliminate much of the inefficiency and waste associated with our throw away society Sustainable consumer services for households services that are delivered to consumers at the premises such as home delivery of organic food appliance leasing mobile laundry services internet marketing of homeservices or car pool schemes provide a key part of the answer of how to reduce material consumption and waste while still turning a profit Yet until now there has been little information to guide the development of such business models and practices and to develop ways to make service based consumption more attractive to consumers than object ownership based models This book equally a practical business handbook and business course text provides the missing link in sustainable household service competitiveness by examining the issues looking at business models providing dozens of real life best practice examples and presenting data from the first large scale consumer survey that explains consumer behaviour and what they want from home service provision The book is an essential resource for businesses and public or nonprofit organizations and housing organizations entering the growing consumer services market It provides a wealth of business know how on what works and what doesn't how to avoid potential pitfalls and how to provide consumer services at the household level that are profitable environmentally sustainable and that add to consumers quality of life
