Mental Testing Cecil Reynolds,2013-11-11 The cultural test bias hypothesis is one of the most important scientific questions facing psychology today Briefly the cultural test bias hypothesis contends that all observed group differences in mental test scores are due to a built in cultural bias of the tests themselves that is group score differences are an artifact of current psychometric methodology If the cultural test bias hypothesis is ultimately shown to be correct then the 100 years or so of psychological research on human differences or differential psychology the scientific discipline underlying all applied areas of human psychology including clinical counseling school and industrial psychology must be reexamined and perhaps dismissed as confounded contaminated or otherwise artifactual In order to continue its existence as a scientific discipline psychology must confront the cultural test bias hypothesis from the solid foundations of data and theory and must not allow the resolution of this issue to occur solely within and to be determined by the political Zeitgeist of the times or any singular work no matter how comprehensive In his recent volume Bias in Mental Testing New York Free Press 1980 Arthur Jensen provided a thorough review of most of the empirical research relevant to the evaluation of cultural bias in psychological and educational tests that was available at the time that his book was prepared Nevertheless Jensen presented only one perspective on those issues in a volume intended not only for the scientific community but for intelligent laypeople as well
