

3.4.3 Bearings can be measured relative to the center of the galaxy. This is analogous to a directional system used on Earth that is based on angular differences to a reference point located at the northern latitudinal axis. In both cases, a bearing of 000 from any point in the galaxy (on the planet's surface) represents a vector directly toward the reference point. The center of the galaxy or the planet's North Pole. Both places which have constant bearing of 000.

3.5 OPERATIONS MANAGEMENT (OPS)

Many shipboard operations involve scheduling resources or hardware (such as power or the use of sensors) that affect a number of departments. In many such cases, it is common for various operations to present conflicting requirements. It is the responsibility of the Operations Manager or Ops to coordinate such activities so that mission goals are not jeopardized. Having a crew member in this decision-making loop is of prime importance because of the wider range of unpredictable situations with which a starship must deal.

The Ops panel presents the Operations Manager with a continually updated list of current major shipboard activities. This list permits Ops to set priorities and allocate resources among current operations. This is especially critical in cases where two or more requests require the use of the same equipment, entail mutually exclusive mission profiles, or involve some unusual safety or tactical considerations.

An example might be a situation where the Stellar Physics department is conducting an experiment using the lateral sensor array to study a nearby binary star. Simultaneously, part of the same array is being time-shared with a long-range cometary population survey. A request from the bridge for a priority scan of a planetary system might jeopardize both studies unless Ops authorizes a minor change in the array, permitting the Stellar Physics observations to use the upper sensor array. Alternatively, Ops may weigh the option of placing one of the ongoing studies on a lower priority to provide the bridge with immediate use of the lateral array.

PRIORITY AND RESOURCE ALLOCATION

Most routine scheduling and resource allocation is done automatically by the Ops program. This frees the Operations Manager from routine activity, leaving him/her able to concentrate on decisions beyond the scope of the artificial intelligence software. The level of these decision tree programs can be set by the Operations Manager, and also varied with the current fleet status of the ship.

In cases where priorities are ambiguous or where specific Ops approval is required, the panel will display a menu of the most probable options for action. In virtually all cases, the Operations Manager also has the ability to input choices beyond those presented by the action menu. This is important because it is impossible for mission planners to anticipate every possible situation. Action menus may be displayed for any current activity (even those which would normally be handled automatically) upon keyboard request from Ops.

During crisis situations and Fleet-wide Power Mode operations, Ops is responsible for supervision of power allocation in coordination with the Engineering Department (See 15.9). Load shedding of nonessential power usage in such situations

When the new medium of CD ROMs emerged industry figures and critics alike proclaimed their virtually unlimited potential Adapting material from well established media like television and film CD ROMs have quickly transformed genres such as science fiction and horror At the same time the realities of actual CD ROMs often fall short of their utopian visions On a Silver Platter marks a coming of age for CD ROMs as a commercially and aesthetically significant medium demanding critical attention Greg Smith brings together media scholars such as Lisa Cartwright Henry Jenkins Janet Murray and Scott Bukatman to analyze how CD ROMs offer alternatives to familiar places to museums to cities and especially to classrooms Examining specific CD ROM titles including Sim City Civilization and Phantasmagoria the contributors argue that CD ROMs are complex texts worthy of close consideration both for how they have changed our understanding of space and genre and for how they will impact the development of future media By examining particular CD ROM texts and contexts On a Silver Platter probes this new medium for insight and understanding into the current state of multimedia and into the future of technology

Handbook of Response to Intervention and Multi-Tiered Systems of Support Paige C. Pullen,Michael J. Kennedy,2018-10-04 Of the many issues facing special education and general education today it is difficult to imagine one more important or timely than response to intervention RTI Almost overnight RTI has become standard practice across the nation Unfortunately RTI remains ill defined falls far short of its evidence based practice goal is almost invariably misused and often results in more harm than good Nevertheless as a conceptual framework RTI has great potential for ensuring that students with disabilities receive appropriate evidence based instruction The mission of this handbook is to present a comprehensive and integrated discussion of response to intervention RTI and its relation to multi tiered systems of support MTSS in both special education and general education Although the two terms are currently used interchangeably distinct differences exist between them Therefore chapters are dedicated to distinguishing the two concepts RTI and MTSS and describing each one s unique role in both general and special education In addition the authors recommend a third term Multi Tiered Instruction to differentiate the practices related to the purpose of the specific intervention
