Chapter 30

The War to End War

1917–1918

The world must be made safe for democracy. Its peace must be planted in the tested foundations of political liberty. We have no selfish ends to achieve. Our deepest wish is no conquest, no dominion. We seek no indemnities for our past, no material compensation for the sacrifices we shall freely make.

WOODROW WILSON, War Message, April 2, 1917

Destiny dealt cruelly with Woodrow Wilson. The lover of peace, as fate would have it, was forced to lead a hesitant and peace-loving nation to war. As the last day of 1916 slipped through the fingers, the president made one final, futile attempt at mediation between the embattled belligerents. On January 22, 1917, he delivered one of his most moving addresses, restating America's commitment to neutrality and declaring that only a negotiated "peace without victory" would prove durable. Germany's warlords responded with a blow of the fist. On January 31, 1917, they announced to an astonished world their decision to wage unrestricted submarine warfare, sinking all ships, including America's, in the zone.

Was this rash act? War with America was the last thing Germany wanted. But after three ghastly years of trench warfare, Germany's leaders decided the distinction between combatants and noncombatants had become meaningless. They could no longer afford to keep their backs to the wall.

launched a filibuster to block the measure. Wilson denounced them as a "little group of willful men" who were rendering a great nation "helpless and contemptible." But their obstruction was a powerful reminder of the continuing strength of American isolationism. Meanwhile, the sensational Zimmermann Note was intercepted and published on March 1, 1917, infuriating Americans, especially westerners. The foreign secretary Arthur Zimmermann had secretly proposed a German-Mexican alliance, promising Mexico Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona. On the heels of this provocation came the dreaded "overt" acts in the Atlantic. German U-boats sank four unarmed American ships. In the first two weeks of the war, the difference between Germany and the United States was not the difference between the Allies and the Central Powers.
