INTRODUCTION

BRIEF BIOGRAPHY OF RICHARD YATES

Richard Yates was the child of an unhappy marriage. His parents were divorced by the time he was three. After the divorce, his mother moved to Paris to study sculpture. Yates flourished as a writer in high school, but had a difficult experience in the army, which he joined at age eighteen, during the last year of the war. Yates volunteered for a dangerous mission and permanently damaged his lungs. He did not go to college, feeling that a war hero didn't need a traditional education, a decision he would always regret. He married, had three children, moved to Paris for a period, and divorced. Yates was an alcoholic and a badly behaved drunk. After his divorce, he lived in awful isolation, spending his time drinking, suffering up and writing. His lung troubles caused him to start every morning by smoking, but he remained a four-pack-a-day smoker until a year before his death at forty-six. Despite once setting his apartment on fire, Yates wrote six other novels and two collections of short stories. Although his writing was always praised by other writers, he never became a true success during his lifetime and supported himself at various times by teaching writing (although he did not believe it could be taught), writing publicity materials for Remington-Rand (a company similar to Xerox Business Machines), and writing speeches for Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy.

HISTORICAL CONTEXT

The Whatevers' generation grew up during the Great Depression, entered adulthood during the Second World War, and started families of their own during the 1950s, a time of unprecedented economic growth in America. The period was characterized by expanded social facilities and rapid technological innovation, but also widespread social conservatism. After the economic and social upheaval of the 1930s and 1940s, American society glorified the pursuit of peaceful domesticity and had less tolerance for individuals who wanted to go their own way.

RELATED LITERARY WORKS

Yates saw F. Scott Fitzgerald's The Great Gatsby and Charles Faulkner's Madame Bovary as his novel's models; the especially sought-to emulate Faulkner's unsentimental portrayal of Emma Bovary and his use of telling details. Yates was an outgrowth of the "lostness" or Postmodernism prevalent in literature, but he was a friend and admirer of Kurt Vonnegut.

EXTRA CREDIT

Stage, Film, Radio, TV, and Print. The Revolution Road play, put on by The Laurel Players, was produced on stage, for radio, and as a film in the 1950s. It was also adapted as a television movie in May of 1955. Revolutionary Road's plot echoes the plot of The Fly-Dead Forest, which is about a girl who dreams of escaping her dull life to a more artistic existence in France.

The Age of the Institution. 1955, the year during which the action of the novel takes place, happens to have been the year during which patients in American mental institutions peaked at 560,000 people. PLOT SUMMARY

The novel begins in western Connecticut, with an unsuccessful first performance by an amateur theater company, The Laurel Players. The lead actress, April Wheeler, begins with a strong performance but eventually becomes embarrassed and exited once it's clear that the show is a flop. At the play's end, her husband, Frank Wheeler, goes to console her. But instead they argue over whether to go out for cocktails with their friends Shep and Milly Campbell. After a scolding match on the side of the highway, Frank punches the roof of the car, injuring his hand. April stops on the couch and Frank sits up drinking.
