Brooks,2000 Timber bridges provide an economical alternative to concrete and steel structures particularly in rural areas with light to moderate vehicle traffic Wooden components of these bridges are treated with chromated copper arsenate type C CCA pentachlorophenol or creosote to prolong the life of the structure from a few years to many decades This results in reduced transportation infrastructure costs and increased public safety However the preservative used to treat the wooden components in timber bridges is lost to the environment in small amounts over time This report describes the concentration of wood preservatives lost to adjacent environments and the biological response to these preservatives as environmental contaminants Six bridges from various states were examined for risk assessment two creosote treated bridges two pentachlorophenol treated bridges and two CCA treated bridges In all cases the largest bridges located in biologically active environments associated with slow flowing water were selected to represent worst case analyses Sediment and water column concentrations of preservative were analyzed upstream from under and downstream from each bridge The observed levels of contaminant were compared with available regulatory standards or benchmarks and with the quantitative description of the aquatic invertebrate community sampled from vegetation and sediments Pentachlorophenol and creosote derived polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons PAHs were not observed in the water near any of the selected bridges However low levels of PAHs were observed in the sediments under and immediately downstream from these bridges Pentachlorophenol concentrations did not approach toxicological benchmarks Sediment concentrations of naphthalene acenaphthylene and phenanthrene exceeded the probable effect level Metal levels at the bridges treated with CCA were less than predicted effect levels in spite of questionable construction practices Adverse biological effects were not observed in the aquatic invertebrate community or laboratory bioassays conducted on water and sediments sampled at each of the bridges Results of this study reveal the need to follow the construction information found in Best Management Practices for the Use of Treated Wood In Aquatic Environments published by Western Wood Preservers Institute Regulatory benchmarks used in risk assessments of this type need to be indexed to local environmental conditions The robust invertebrate communities associated with slow moving streams over soft bottoms were not susceptible to the concentrations of PAHs that would be expected to affect more sensitive taxa which typically are located in faster moving water over hard bottoms Contaminants released from timber bridges into these faster systems where more sensitive taxa are located are significantly diluted and not found at biologically significant levels

Water-resources Investigations Report ,1995 Quality Issues in Clinical Genetic Services Ulf Kristoffersson,Jörg Schmidtke,J. J. Cassiman,2010-06-25 Initially genetic disorders were all considered as rare diseases At present in the mid of 2009 the OMIM catalogue contains information on more than 12 000 entries of which about 2500 are available for clinical testing based on the identification of the responsible gene defect However altogether it has been estimated that about 8 percent of a population in the economically developed countries will during their lifetime suffer from a disease mainly as the result of their genetic constitution Adding to that it is estimated that all diseases have a genetic component which will determine who will be at a higher than average risk for a certain disorder Further it is postulated that in the near future this genetic profiling could become useful in selecting an appropriate therapy adapted to the genetic constitution of the person Thus genetic disorders are not rare Measuring quality of health care related processes became an issue in the 1990s mainly in laboratory medicine but also for hospitals and other health care systems In many countries national authorities started to implement recommendations guidelines or legal procedures regulating quality of health care delivery In laboratory medicine in parallel the use of accreditation as a method assuring high quality standards in testing came in use With the increasing possibilities of performing molecular genetic testing genetic laboratories needed to become involved in this process As many genetic disorders are rare most laboratories worldwide offered analysis for a specific set of disorders and therefore very early on a transborder flow of samples occurred While international quality criteria ISO have been in existence for a number of years the regulation of quality issues still may differ between countries Based on their personal experience in the varying fields of quality research and clinical implementation of quality criteria in genetic services the authors of thisbook share their experience and give examples of the implementation of quality issues in national quality systems worldwide This book which is the result of the effort of many persons is destined to aid laboratory managers and counsellors health care managers and other stakeholders in national or international health care service to improve the services to the benefit of patients with suspected genetic disorders
