RESEARCH DESIGN AND METHODS: A cross-sectional study was conducted in 2007 in a representative sample of 1,000 adults in the United States. Data were collected from a national probability-based telephone survey. The survey included questions about the respondent's use of a mobile phone, their use of a mobile phone for text messaging, and their use of a mobile phone for other purposes. The survey also included questions about the respondent's use of a mobile phone for other purposes. The survey was conducted by a professional survey organization.
