Technical and Technological Solutions Towards a Sustainable Society and Circular Economy Jamal Mabrouki, Azrour Mourade, 2024-05-13. Resource depletion and ecological risks are more than ever at the heart of societal and economic debates. In the 1970s the developed countries saw the Fordist growth regime crumble in parallel with the growing awareness of the ecological issue. Since the first industrial revolutions technological dynamics have been the cause of many environmental problems and there is a consensus on the diagnosis. Integrated technologies reduce resource use and or pollution at source by using cleaner production methods. This generally leads to a reduction in the by products, energy inputs and resources used by companies to produce goods. Integrated production technologies reduce negative environmental impacts at source by substituting or modifying cleaner technologies. Examples of integrated or cleaner production technologies are the recirculation of materials, the use of environmentally friendly materials such as the substitution of water for organic solvents etc. However the implementation of integrated production technologies is often hampered by obstacles related to cost, coordination and skill inertia problems and to the productive organisation of companies. In addition to the high investment costs of new integrated technologies additional barriers may emerge depending on the nature of the environmental problem and the type of environmental regulation in question.

The Mobility of Displaced Syrians World Bank, 2020-01-27. The war in Syria now in its eighth year continues to take its toll on the Syrian people. More than half of the population of Syria remains displaced. 5.6 million persons are registered as refugees outside of the country and another 6.2 million are displaced within Syria's borders. The internally displaced persons include 2 million school age children of these, less than half attend school. Another 739,000 Syrian children are out of school in the five neighborhood countries that host Syria's refugees. The loss of human capital is staggering and it will create permanent hardships for generations of Syrians going forward. Despite the tragic prospects for renewed fighting in certain parts of the country, an overall reduction in armed conflict is possible going forward. However, international experience shows that the absence of fighting is rarely a singular trigger for the return of displaced people. Numerous other factors including improved security and socioeconomic conditions in origin states, access to property and assets, the availability of key services, and restitution in home areas play important roles in shaping the scale and composition of the returns. Overall, refugees have their own calculus of return that considers all of these factors and assesses available options. The Mobility of Displaced Syrians: An Economic and Social Analysis sheds light on the mobility calculus of Syrian refugees. While dismissing any policies that imply wrongful practices involving forced repatriation, the study analyzes factors that may be considered by refugees in their own decisions to relocate. It provides a conceptual framework supported by data and analysis to facilitate an impartial conversation about refugees and their mobility choices. It also explores the diversified policy toolkit that the international community has available and the most effective ways in which the toolkit can be adapted to maximize the well-being of refugees, host countries, and the people in Syria.
