

Banning Texting while Driving Saves Lives

✓ Exclusively available on IvyPanda

Texting while driving involves communicating through written messages using mobile phones. This action increases the risk of fatal accidents.

To tackle this problem, many nations have endorsed laws that ban texting while driving. Such laws exist in Columbia, Guam, and 7 other states in America (Tison 1). This paper supports that banning texting while driving saves lives as it prevents most causes of accidents. The paper first discusses the rate of texting while driving and the existing death records. It then highlights the effects and reaction by states to texting while driving.

Prevalence and Risks caused by the Action

Survey proves that two-thirds of people aged below 30 use phones when driving and over one-third agree to texting when driving (Gershowitz 584). Since these figures seem to increase, it is justifiable for states to ban the practice, particularly when tied with the risks of texting while driving.

Scholars at North Texas University found that texting while driving accounted for almost 20,000 fatalities between 2001 and 2007, after examining data on traffic casualty and texting reports (Gershowitz 583). Another study by the National Safety Council estimated that use of cell phone while driving accounted for about 1.6. Million accidents in every year, with texting while driving constituting 200,000 of those accidents (Wilson 2215).

Effects of Texting while Driving

Behaviors like text messaging, which involve switching of tasks, and requires extensive durations before execution, affect driving severely. Texting when driving seems consistent with a changing mold of concentration, where attention shifts to either texting, or driving. Once drivers change their concentration to activity of text messaging,

Recruiter Journal, 2009 An Investigation of the Effects of Reading and Writing Text-based Messages While Driving Joel M. Cooper, Christine Yager, Susan T. Chrysler, 2011 Previous research using driving simulation crash data and naturalistic methods has begun to shed light on the dangers of texting while driving Perhaps because of the dangers no published work has experimentally investigated the dangers of texting while driving using an actual vehicle Additionally previous research does not clearly differentiate the dangers associated with reading and writing text messages To address these issues 42 participants drove an instrumented research vehicle on a closed driving course Participants drove under a control text reading and text writing condition Baseline text reading and writing data were also collected outside of the research vehicle Results indicated that impairment associated with texting while driving may be greater than previously thought Principally when reading or writing texts drivers exhibited reductions in reaction time that were nearly twice as great as previously thought Drivers also exhibited nearly identical impairment in the reading and writing conditions suggesting that both reading and writing text messages may be equally dangerous These results have immediate implications for improving our understanding of the dangers of texting while driving and may be useful for future public policy discussions
