

Oceans Study Guide

The ocean is an important and unique ecosystem that supports many kinds of organisms.

Oceans:

First, what is an ocean? An ocean is a large body of salt water surrounding large land masses. Oceans cover about 71% of Earth's surface. They contain about 97% of Earth's water. This means that changes to the ocean can have many effects on the planet.

Earth has five major oceans:

- Arctic Ocean
- Atlantic Ocean
- Indian Ocean
- Pacific Ocean
- Southern Ocean

An ocean is a marine ecosystem. The word "marine" means anything that is found in, or made by, the sea.

Major Ocean Features:

The bottom of the ocean is called the ocean floor. It is not all flat. It has many different geographic features just like the rest of Earth's surface. The depth of the ocean floor varies. This means that the distance from the surface of the water to the ocean floor can be short (shallow) or long (deep). For example, the continental shelf is fairly shallow, but ocean trenches are very deep.

As the depth of the ocean water increases, the environment changes. The temperature of the water decreases, as well as the amount of light. This means that very deep parts of the ocean are cold and dark. Also, the amount of pressure and salinity (salt in the water) increase as you move farther down toward the ocean floor.

Important features of the ocean floor include the continental shelf, continental slope, continental rise, abyssal plain, and ocean trench.
