A measurement can only be as accurate and precise as the instrument that produced it. A scientist must be able to express the accuracy of a number, not just its numerical value. We can determine the accuracy of a number by the number of significant figures it contains.

Example: 129 has 3 significant figures.
- 2) Zeros between significant digits are always significant.
Example: 5,007 has 4 significant figures.
- 3) Trailing zeros in a number are significant only if the number contains a decimal point.
Example: 100.0 has 4 significant figures.
100 has 1 significant figure.
- 4) Zeros in the beginning of a number whose only function is to place the decimal point are not significant.
Example: 0.0025 has 2 significant figures.
- 5) Zeros following a decimal significant figure are significant.
Example: 0.000470 has 3 significant figures.
0.47000 has 5 significant figures.
