The Effectuationism Philosophy System Transcending Classical Western Philosophy:

The Effectuationism Philosophy System MR Peter Kinane, 2014-11-09 Western Philosophy very much rests on primal intellect informed premises for which Plato opted. Indeed he declares this choice in his Phaedo. Rather than try to give all sorts of reasons for different phenomena, Socrates suggests that in the poverty of our ignorance we should just cling to the hypothesis we have: the Theory of Forms, and rely on that for our explanations. His Theory of Forms was a theory of categorical forms. He would have been informed in this choice by his primal intellect, the intellect of the primal senses. This intellect features perception as expressing independent phenomena of definite boundaries and unchanging essence; it features categorical forms; it expresses a subject-object world of categorical value, just the stuff for inter-personal and inter-community and inter-species strife if it is in tension with nature, indefinite, dynamic and multi-faceted. This primal intellect informed premise launched or crystallised Western Philosophy into primal intellect level formulation or expression of the nature of things; it informed all subsequent concepts that emerged. Concepts are system-particular. A system consists of a premise which informs the concepts which emerge, and the premise and concepts comprise the system. Concepts do not translate or transfer across systems. The only escape is through deconstructing concepts or data to, as it were, quantum field theory, wave function and feeling the potential alternative formulations, crystallizations or collapses. The most rigorous potential of the featuring data information forces will prevail. In this way a new system emerged which I called The Effectuationism Philosophy System. One of its first principles premises Effect through and indeed as tension of relationship of forces, indefinite, dynamic and inferentially multi-faceted. Effect, verb, non-referential. Unlike Western Philosophy, The Effectuationism Philosophy System only features or expresses categorical form value, implying a subject-object space and time world at the level of primal organisms. At the earlier level of Quantum Mechanics and the later level of higher intellect transcending primal intellect value emerges or effects as indefinite, dynamic tension of forces. Different forces, different effects, different I. At the earlier and later stages there is no I, no categorical ego or first person, no subject-object world effect. Much of Eastern Philosophy also expresses categoricalism, if only the I, the ego. Buddhism, however, seems closer to Effectuationism and perhaps like it is more respectful of diversity, whether of individual humans or of other species. However, Eastern Philosophy, with which I am only minimally acquainted, perhaps does not start so much as Western Philosophy does with the four elements but with how people should live. It is perhaps somewhat more a matter of sage wisdom and starting at the other end. In the Introduction I review Western Philosophy in a way which I believe makes an impressive case that it is on a par with Flat Earth theory and that Western mankind should rouse its attention to conceptualise modern higher intellect informed. The Effectuationism Philosophy System. Having conceptualised the two systems, the two systems then featuring in tension with each other, one would thrive and the other decline. An upgrade of the Western world to a modern higher intellect informed system from a Bronze Age primal intellect informed system is surely something to engage any people interested in.

potential modern formulations of their nature This new system features form value as effecting through featuring forces indefinite dynamic multi faceted It does not alienate Mother Nature The need to go outside of Nature Matter to explain life and consciousness does not arise and so the inherent incoherence and categoricalism of the Nature Supernatural dualism does not express

Development, Presentation and Reception of New Philosophy System: Effectuationism Peter Kinane, 2017-01-31 A new philosophy system emerged in late December 1995 and was published in January 1996 In this book I briefly give my account of the development and presentation of the system and its reception by the philosophy specialists to whose attention it came It features scans of documents of the journey Perhaps I should not have expected much of the Western Philosophy profession as it is one which turned out pretty much the same logic for 2 400 years largely on par with the logic data of Flat Earth Cosmology theory Their speciality is pretty much to read and transcribe It might explain the reception Hopefully by publishing the documents may be more apparent and useful to any future historians or others who might be interested in the development and presentation of the system and its reception by the philosophy specialists to whose attention it came Of course so much the better if it brings more attention to the new system 2016 edition Effectuationism Philosophy System Moving on from Bronze Age Ideas It might fall to non specialists to address endorse and promote it However modern non specialists seem to prefer to follow trendy cues on what to read and indeed seem to give precious little priority to complex examination of life of the nature of things Perhaps this is necessary specialization in the modern world However it probably comes at the cost of heavy reliance on cue makers including specialists sometimes in small fields or very old swamps such as Philosophy Outsourced thinking What if such a swamp hybridizes like philosophy specialists bringing concepts of their Bronze Age baggage to bear on a new system instead of draining and ceases to cue Do a spot check Check Amazon for E PS perhaps here https://www.amazon.com/Effectuationism-Philosophy-System-Moving-Bronze/dp/0995454809/ref=sr_1_1?ie=UTF8&qid=1485634584&sr=8&1 keywords peter kinane Peter Kinane
